A Strange Busy World
Florida's Big Gain
Two Good Sailors
Portugal's Warning

—By Arthur Brisbane—

NEWS ITEMS of many different kinds in our strange and busy world.

The recent Japanese typhoon destroyed 11,000 houses, doing $50,000,000 damage, causing many deaths.

On Long Island, H. S. Black, one of New York's most important and active business men, chairman, president or director in more than a dozen great corporations, sent a bullet through his head. Too much strain, too much trying, too much "spreading out." The big man has his worries.

Eminently respectable houses of New Yorkers were raided on Long Island. Each concealed a secret radio sending broadcasting set, illegally installed. The "respectabilities" were arrested, accused of sending information and warnings to rum runners on the water. There were many such stations along the New Jersey shore during the war, sending information to the Germans, according to the [illegible] ambassador, Count de Cellere.

Agha Zaro, ancient Turk alleged to be 156 years old, enjoys New York, according to his press agent. The old man is a valuable asset and the press agent should be cautious about diet and other things. England possessed in Thomas Parr, the oldest of men, according to authentic documents.

Born in 1483, he died in 1635. He married at 120, worked well at 130. The English king, interested, sent for him. Parr came to London, was entertained and died. Long life is a matter of diet, fresh air and regular life.

Florida, like a boy with growing pains, has known troubles. The worst was the inrush of real estate schemers followed by crowds, buying lots. All that was a greater calamity than any dozen assorted fruit flies. You can kill fruit flies. You can't kill stupidity.

However, nothing can interfere with the immediate growth or gigantic ultimate prosperity of such a state as Florida, destined to be the permanent home of millions, and the winter sun parlor of many other millions.

E. D. Lambright, editor of the Tampa Morning Tribune, wishes the world to know that in percentage of population increase, Florida comes second to California only. Florida's percentage of gain is three times that of the 27 states thus far enumerated. For one that lost money in the recent slump hundreds will make Florida fortunes in years to come.

Two Annapolis midshipmen will be dismissed, 15 others severely punished because two young women disguised in Annapolis blouses, were allowed to dine in the Naval Academy's mess hall. It was wicked to let the two young women see the mysteries of the mess hall. But the two young men now to be dismissed might have made navy men. The Secretary of the Navy might read over again the lustre of young Nelson, greatest fighting sailor of all time.

When captain of a British ship that was coasting up and down our shores, during the Revolution, he saw a girl in Canada, fell desperately in love, abandoned vessel, worst of all crimes. His friends carried him back to the ship by force, kidnaping him to save his reputation and honor. Sometimes energy wasted in a foolish direction, means energy to be used later, usefully.

When Wolfe asked for a chance to capture Quebec, he strutted up and down boasting so much, that his superior was tempted to dismiss him. But he did climb the Heights of Abraham and take Quebec, dying of wounds on the battlefield. "There is a cure for cowardice, none for carelessness." That should be remembered by critics of youthful foolishness.

Assurances of protection given to Jews in Rumania by the recently returned and presumably reformed King Carol, amount to little.

At Bukowine, 3000 armed farmers announce their intention to "finish with the Shumites and authorities." They turn against the government, declaring that it tried to protect the Jews.

If those farmers would read the history of Portugal and contrast it with the histories of England and of Holland, they would know what happens to nations that persecute and drive out Jews, and to nations that treat them justly. They would know what will probably happen to Rumania. Wait until Russia comes, as it will, into the hands of an aggressive conqueror.

Redmond Faces Trial in Huge Failure

Immediate action to bring back to Boston George F. Redmond, former "bucket shop" operator, to stand trial on state charges growing out of the $12,000,000 collapse of his brokerage firm in 1923, has been started by Dist. Atty. William J. Foley.

Mr. Foley made the announcement of activity in the Redmond case today, hinting his decision was influenced by new information in his possession which indicated that a trial might reveal the names of several persons of wealth and political importance who may have aided Redmond.

Redmond was released from the Federal penitentiary at Atlanta in December, 1929 after serving five years of a ten years' sentence for using the mails to defraud. He was paroled to officials of the Salvation Army in New York. Recently he is said to have embarked on a new business career in New York city.

Foley made this sudden announcement of a new investigation in the Redmond case while pressing his activity into complaints of the sale in fraudulent stocks in Boston made to the Evening American Stock Fraud Bureau.

REOPEN REDMOND CASE

Mr. Foley said: "The Federal authorities, of course, limited their evidence entirely to such facts as proved the Redmond company had used the mails to defraud.

"I believe that if we can force Redmond to stand trial here on the several charges of larceny pending against him, we will learn what influences were behind him to enable him to operate his bucket shops in such a bold manner.

"Most of the millions taken by Redmond and his associates, whoever they may have been, were taken chiefly from investors in Suffolk County.

"While I have no desire to persecute a man already punished

TILDEN SPRAINS ANKLE IN PRACTICE

"I'll Play if It Kills Me," Declares Star After Fall on Paris Court

By FREDERICK K. ABBOT

Paris, July 21 (INS)—"It is really nothing. I'll play in the Davis Cup finals if it kills me!"

Grimacing with pain as masseurs worked feverishly over a sprained ankle which he sustained in practice play on the Roland Garros tennis courts today in preparation for the forthcoming Davis Cup challenge matches, William T. Tilden, America's grand old man of the game made this statement to International News Service a few minutes after sustaining the injury.

"Ouch! Gee, that hurt!" he interjected explosively as the masseurs became particularly vigorous in his treatment.

"But it's all right. Don't say anything about this injury. I'll be displayed with the correspond-

Bishop Cannon Is Wed Secretly to Widow

London, July 21—Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of the Methodist Episcopal Church, was married at Christ Church, Mayfair, last Tuesday, to Mrs. Helen Hawley McCallum, a widow, of E. 68th st., New York, it was made known today.

The announcement came as a big surprise both here and in America, for it was not known Cannon had a romance.

The Rev. Dr. Freeman was the officiating clergyman.

Bishop and Mrs. Cannon were married by a special license issued at the faculty office.

A friend of Cannon, Sir Henry Lunn, editor of the Review of the Churches, was instrumental in obtaining through the Archbishop of Canterbury the special license.

Bishop Cannon is 65 years of age and was born in Salisbury, Md. He entered the ministry in 1888 and was married that same year to Laura Virginia Bennett of Louisa, Va., She died about two years ago.

Slayer Held for Trial

BERNARD THOMPSON THURLOW BENTLEY

Stock Prices Slump in Late Bear Raid

New York, July 21 (AP)—The stock market turned sharply reactionary in the late trading today and many leading industrial, utility, railroad and specialty shares lost $3 to $7 of the gains they had piled up during the baby bull movement of recent weeks.

Moderate early declines on profit-taking were stretched into much larger losses in the final half-hour, when the bear faction's experiments at short selling disclosed little resistance throughout the list. The ticker, which had frequently been idle during the earlier hours, fell seven minutes behind the market.

U. S. Steel, American Telephone, General Electric and North American showed net losses of $3 to $4 a share, while New York Central, Chesapeake & Ohio, Consolidated Gas, and Westinghouse Electric, among others, dropped $3 to $7 below the Saturday close. J. I. Case broke 12.

THOMPSON WAS GOOD TO HER, AUNT DECLARED

If No Will Is Found Saugus Woman's [illegible] Will Share in Her Estate

Through the irony of fate, Bernard Thompson, held without bail in Saugus court today for slaying his aunt, Mrs. K. Edith (Thompson) Wight, may prove to be her heir, Asst. Dist. Atty. Edward F. Lynn revealed.

"At the time was murdered, according to his confession, planned the murder and robbery which netted him $4, he may have been sole heir to the $30,000 estate of his aunt.

Asst. Dist. Atty. Flynn learned that only a week [illegible] two days before her death, Mrs. Wight talked with a friend about the disposition of her estate.

START HUNT FOR WILL

"The only one who will get any of my money will be my nephew Bernard," she is quoted as saying. "He is the only one who ever tried to be nice to me and who ever did anything to help me out. All I have will go to him."

As a result of the report of this conversation, officials began a search of Boston and Lynn banks, seeking a will.

If no will is found a public administrator will be appointed to dispose of the estate, both real and personal, to which it is expected there will be numerous claimants.

According to police Thompson admitted he put his blackjack in his pocket when he started for his aunt's house, with the intention of slaying and robbing her.

LOOT IN LOOP

The loot he obtained consisted of $4 and a small amount of change.

Thompson was ordered held by Judge William F. Ludden after State Detective William F. Murray testified the defendant admitted he had planned the killing before he went to his aunt's Saugus home.

Murray repeated an oral confession he said Thompson made to him, including the admission he had made the blackjack with which the murder was committed, with the intention of holding up and robbing people in a career of crime.

The preliminary hearing lasted about an hour, three witnesses being heard, and at its conclusion Thompson, shackled to police officers, was taken to Salem Jail to await Grand Jury action.

NERVOUS IN COURT

The defendant showed his first signs of nervousness as he sat beside Patrolman Thurlow Bentley of the Saugus department in the little courtroom.

Thompson kept his head lowered, and scratched aimlessly at the seat of his chair with his nails.

When asked to plead he responded "Not guilty," in a barely audible voice. The case will be presented

SWELTERING SENATE NEARS VOTE TO RATIFY NAVAL TREATY

FIGHT IS ALL OVER SAYS MOSES

Predicts Final Ballot on Pact Will Be Taken by Nightfall

Washington, July 21 (AP)—With the thermometer approaching record heights, an exhausted Senate approached a final vote on the London Naval Limitations Treaty today with some leaders believing it might be reached tonight, or tomorrow at the latest.

Before the stack of reservations could be tackled Senator Wagner, Democrat, New York, spoke in behalf of the pact. Both sides then were ready to go to work on the reservations, determined to end the unequal contest.

61 ANSWER ROLL.

More than the necessary two-thirds majority is ready to vote for the treaty and the opening roll call today showed 61 members present. Senator Brookhart, Republican, Iowa, returned to the chamber today. It was the first time he has been present during the special session.

Senator Moses, Republican, New Hampshire, one of the leaders of the opposition, predicted a vote before nightfall. He said:

"If no one speaks more than I do today we will be through by 3 or 4 o'clock."

Senator Wagner in his speech said:

"The question of security has been raised, but I cannot understand how we can possibly be less secure with a larger treaty fleet when the fleets of other nations are limited than we are at present with a smaller fleet and other nations unlimited in their construction."

"FEEBLE," SAYS WAGNER

"This treaty leaves the world with a burden of too many guns and too many ships rather than too few. The tremendous $3,000,000,000 armadas which the treaty sets up somehow do not click with the professed objectives of the disarmament conference.

"It is a feeble treaty, a weak and inefficient instrument, but it is better than competitive building. If it does not carry us forward far toward the goal of disarmament, at least it applies the brakes against the rapid sliding which had already begun."

Senator Thomas, Democrat, Oklahoma, urged ratification. He said the pact was not the final end of international conference and cooperation, but rather an only step number two in the march toward peace rather than war.

"If this treaty is rejected," he added, "no nation will be justified in considering seriously our requests for further conferences."

Blames Woman in Friend's Auto Death

"I find that Mrs. Jones came to her death as a consequence of the negligent conduct of Mrs. Robbins, whose conduct, however, I do not find to have been so grossly negligent as could be called recklessness."

This was the finding today of Judge Oscar Marden of Canton, after an inquest in the killing of Mrs. Ethel L. Jones of Canton, by a train at Dedham road crossing of the New Haven railroad on May 24. Mrs. Jones was with Mrs. Edna Robbins, also of Canton, when she drove her auto into the path of a passenger train after waiting for a freight to pass.

$1,623,753 IN STEEL BONUS PAID GRACE

Bethlehem Company Head Is Compelled in Court to Reveal Facts Sought by Eaton

Youngstown, O., July 21 (AP)—Eugene G. Grace received a bonus of $1,623,753 in 1929 as president of Bethlehem Steel Corp., he testified today in the suit to enjoin sale of the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. to Bethlehem.

The bonus was in addition to the stipulated $12,000 annual salary to which he testified last week.

Revelation of Grace's compensation for last year followed a hard-fought three-day legal battle.

Attorneys for the Cyrus S. Eaton interests, opposed to the merger of the Youngstown and Bethlehem companies, sought the testimony in support of their contention that the Bethlehem company paid Grace unwarranted amounts, and that these amounts were fraudulently concealed from the stockholders of the Youngstown company when they ratified the merger last April.

An objection by defense attorneys to the question about Grace's bonus was considered over the week-end by Judge David G. Jenkins and overruled shortly after court opened today. The court held that inasmuch as Grace testified his present bonus arrangement had been in effect for the last five and one half years he would be allowed to state the amount.

Grace then testified that since 1925 he had received a bonus of 3.319 per cent of the net earnings after fixed charges, less an amount equal to the annual preferred dividend, but before depreciation. The earnings of Bethlehem were $49,000,000 in 1929, making his bonus $1,623,753.

He explained that if earnings were low, he was entitled only to a bonus of ½ per cent, but explained that since 1925 earnings had been high enough to permit the 3.319 per cent.

SUDDENLY ENDS 'RAID' HEARING

Presentation of evidence at the master's hearing on the bill in equity seeking an injunction to stop police raids at 358-358-A Tremont st., ended suddenly today when Assistant Corporation Counsel Leo Schwartz made the surprise announcement that there would be no defense witnesses.

David A. Marshall, as master, sitting at Pemberton sq. courthouse, was prepared to hear 20 or more policemen, on hand to testify in defense of the department, when Schwartz made his announcement.

"I feel that my brother has so well presented his case for the defendants that I rest," Schwartz said.

Atty. Bernard J. Killion, counsel for David J. "Beano" Breen and James J. Mannon, plaintiffs, again demanded that doors removed from the building, a suspected liquor nuisance, be brought before the master by police.

Schwartz replied that the master and counsel had been shown all the doors removed by the police.

Arguments will be made by counsel for both sides tomorrow afternoon.

TWO CREWS IN ENDURANCE HOP CHAT IN AIR

Talk to Each Other by Radio as They Grind Off Hours in Attempt at Record

Roosevelt Field, N. Y., July 21 (AP)—The crews of two endurance planes—the "Red" and the "Green"—chatted with each other by radio over Roosevelt field today as they idled through the first hours of their efforts to exceed the 554-hour record of Chicago's Hunter brothers.

The two planes went up last night within fifty-five seconds of each other and each had its first refueling this morning.

Hearst-Fox Camera Rouses Ex-King Michael's Boyish Curiosity At Royal Review

AT THE MANEUVERS

THE FIRST SOUND MOTION PICTURES of Rumania's new king, Carol II; Michael, the deposed baby king, and Prince Nicholas, taken together since the prodigal's return are shown in recent issues of Hearst Metrotone News and Fox Movietone News. The pictures were made at a review of the Rumanian troops held by the new king and Michael, now the crown prince.

THE CAMERA INTRIGUES

KING, EX-KING AND PRINCE

Michael apparently was much more interested in watching operations of movie camera men than he was in movement of soldiers. After pictures were made, Michael insisted upon having the intricate mechanism of the sound camera explained to him. The camera men went into great detail telling Michael how the sound machine recorded one's voice.

RESERVES CALLED TO UNTANGLE NEW HUB SYSTEM TRAFFIC JAM

PEDESTRIANS GET IN WAY OF AUTOS

Motor Cars Too Fast for 17-Mile Limit; Police Are Delighted With the Plan

On the whole, satisfactory, but with some defects that experience will correct.

That appeared to be the consensus of public opinion regarding Boston's downtown automatic control traffic signals which, turned on yesterday, met their first real test during the rush hours today.

The most serious defects were apparent near the northern boundaries of the unit—Haymarket sq. and Scollay sq. Traffic jammed at those spots and was so bad north of Haymarket sq. along North Washington st. to the Charlestown bridge that reserve traffic officers were sent into the area to straighten it out.

WALKERS CAUGHT MIDWAY

The cause appeared to be the movement of traffic approaching the signal area at a higher rate of speed than the 17-mile-an-hour limit to which the lights have been synchronized. This fault, evidently, cannot be wholly corrected until all the units are in operation.

Another fault was the too-short space of time allowed pedestrians to cross on the red and yellow lights at certain points. This was particularly true of Scollay sq. at Sudbury and Hanover st. points.

Pedestrians starting across on the safety signal found themselves in the center of the street or marooned on the safety island when the lights flashed green and traffic began to roll.

At all such spots traffic officers were on hand to look out for the safety of pedestrians. There was considerable jay-walking.

HORSE OUT OF PLACE

Horse drawn vehicles, which cannot possibly move at a 17-mile an hour rate, present another problem for they delay the movement of motor cars to considerable extent.

A rule that horse vehicles must stay on the extreme right hand side of the street would materially help the movement. There is a vague possibility that all such vehicles will be barred from the downtown area, but it is very vague and the problem presented by them especially in streets where parking is allowed, is probably the most serious of all.

The jam at Haymarket sq. was so heavy at 9:45 a.m. that it was necessary to turn off the lights at that point for a half hour, while police allowed enough cars to flow into the downtown area to relieve the backed-up congestion.

BIG AREA BENEFITED

The Boylston and Washington corner was another junction offering some study. Congestion there evidently resulted from a wrong timing.

The rest of the area, including its southern boundaries at Tremont and Broadway and Washington and Broadway, appeared greatly to benefit by the new system.

One motorist reported that from Otis and Summer sts. he drove without a stop past synchronizing lights to Tremont and Broadway.

At Park and Tremont sts. the usual jam was missing, even at the height of the rush hour. Traffic Officer Thomas Leonard, on duty at that point, said the signals were a big improvement. Some confusion resulted from the fact that the left turn from Tremont into Park st. for vehicles moving north had been disallowed. Although a large sign so informed drivers, many attempted to make it.

CONRY IS SATISFIED

Traffic Divisions 20 and 21, reported to police headquarters that the test was satisfactory.

Traffic Commissioner Joseph A. Conry, who toured the entire area, emphasized the fact that faults were naturally expected but that a two-week test should make them all apparent for correction.

Night workers who have been able to speed through practically deserted streets offered some complaint, finding themselves obliged to slow down to 17 miles an hour or stop at each intersection equipped with lights.

One such motorist figured it took him 10 minutes longer than usual to reach a Summer st. office entering the control area from the southern boundary.

Commissioner Hultman placed four men at Washington and Summer sts. to force pedestrians to remain on the sidewalks until the signal is given for them to cross. The same number of officers were on duty at Boylston and Tremont sts. to enforce the mandate of the lights for pedestrians there.

TO CORRECT FAULTS

Traffic Commissioner Joseph A. Conry, accompanied by newspapermen today motored over the entire signal controlled area from police headquarters and return in one hour and 15 minutes.

The commissioner noted the apparent imperfections in the system and said engineers already were at work on plans to iron them out.

"On the whole," he said, "the system gives every degree of satisfaction that any reasonable and prudent man has a right to expect. I am entirely satisfied with the operation even considering a very few imperfections which can be corrected in a few days."

Trouble for New System—They Go on Wrong Light

SEEING GREEN, this throng of busy Bostonians and suburbanites surged across Tremont st. at Winter st. today as if they had been autos and had received the "Go" signal in Boston's new automatic traffic handling system. That's one trouble with the automatic plan—it cannot make jaywalkers obey lights or colors, nor can it shout gruffly: "Hey, you! Where d' you think YOU'RE goin'?" For that matter, it cannot hale a pedestrian to court, but it'll work if the pedestrians do their part, police say. (Staff photo.)

SCIENCE TO END BABY MIXUP

Chicago, July 21 (AP)—Charles Evans Watkins will either remain the infant son of the William Watkins by nightfall or else he will become George Edward Bamberger, son of the Charles Bambergers.

Health Commissioner Arnold H. Kegel has called a neurologist, a dermatologist and an anthropologist to do the deciding.

Both boys were born the same day three weeks ago in the same hospital. Their mothers were discharged the same day. Then Father Watkins found a tape marked "Bamberger" on his baby's back. One marked "Watkins" was found on Baby Bamberger's back.

The Bambergers refused to give up their baby. They said the tapes were wrong. A blood test was unsatisfactory, and Dr. Kegel depended today on a comparison of nervous reactions, skin pigmentation, racial characteristics and eye features.

Differentiation by inherited characteristics was hopeless. Mrs. Watkins is light complected; her husband dark. Mrs. Bamberger is dark; her husband light. Mrs. Watkins has a protruding jaw; her husband's is receding. Mr. Bamberger's jaw is receding; his wife's protruding. And both babies have receding jaws.

Brighton Boy, Riding With Father, Killed

Franklin, N. H., July 21 (AP)—Joseph Mindick, 16, of Brighton, Mass., was killed here today when a truck on which he was riding with his father struck an electric light pole, near the Bristol Railroad crossing. The boy's neck was broken.

His father, M. Mindick, was not seriously injured, and was treated at Franklin Hospital.

Women Have to Speed Up or Get Hit in Traffic Plan

By FRANCES BAIRD

How can a woman loaded down with packages and accompanied by a small child be expected to cross Tremont st. and West st. in 15 seconds?

That's what a lot of women shoppers wanted to know today when the new flexible traffic system caught them unawares.

"I am having my hands full here all right," the officer on duty sighed as he wiped the perspiration from his brow after saving a mother from the wheels of an auto taking the left turn out of West st.

"The pedestrians are not used to left turns and are often fooled when they see traffic stop and start across on the correct light."

His biggest job today was stopping people from crossing from the Common side when the lights changed to red to halt motor traffic before they became red and yellow for foot traffic.

TIME VARIES

"Many women seem to think traffic officers are placed here to save them from getting smashed at this corner," the officer continued. "The system ought to work fine when people understand it, but just now it is a case of thinking fast and signalling fast to prevent accidents."

At the Washington and Summer sts. corner, where one would expect the crowds to jam traffic, the system was working like a charm, also at Boylston and Tremont sts. Pedestrians have 40 seconds to cross at Washington and 32 seconds at Boylston.

The crossing time for pedestrians is different at different corners, depending on the amount of motor traffic.

MUST KEEP COOL

Women shoppers, especially foreign women with children, had an exciting day in Scollay and Bowdoin sqs., where the intersecting streets and different timing in lights created the worst traffic jam in years.

"The only thing to do is to keep cool," said the officer on duty at Washington and Court sts. "If the officer gets nervous the trouble grows worse, so all we can do is warn pedestrians and if they do not choose to obey we dare not take hold of them and save them from their own folly.

"It is dangerous for anyone, man, woman or child, to disobey traffic officers now. It is taking one's life in his hands to try to slip through motor traffic, too."

Burglar on the Job Is Victim of Heat in New York

New York, July 21 (AP)—Today's first heat victim was Charles Gallagher, burglar.

He and two pals were sauntering through Fulton st., unable to sleep, and somebody suggested breaking into Herman Jackson's jewelry store.

They rammed the front door and smashed a showcase. A patrolman who heard the noise found Gallagher on the floor, overcome by heat and by a trivial glass cut on the arm. He had two watches and some beads in his pocket. His companions ran away.

Coast Guard Prize Worth Half-Million

New York, July 21 (AP)—An oil barge loaded with liquor, seized by coast guardsmen yesterday 21 miles off Sea Girt, N. J., was brought to port today.

Federal officials valued the barge its liquor cargo and the tug which towed it at half a million dollars. Ten men were arrested on the vessels. They refused to talk until they could consult attorneys.

SLAYER MAY GET AUNT'S MONEY

The first witness called was Patrolman James F. Sullivan of the Saugus department.

He testified he went to the Vine st. home of Mrs. Wight, former private investigator, at 12:50 p. m. on Thursday. After trying without success to obtain entrance through front and rear doors, Officer Sullivan said he raised a ladder to a sun parlor window and entered.

DISCOVERED BODY

He said he found the body, with the head beaten in and thrust under an old-fashioned bureau. The witness said he immediately called Chief of Police Roland F. Mansfield and notified him murder had been committed.

Dr. Loring Grimes, associate medical examiner, testified to being called to the house and corroborated the testimony of Officer Sullivan as to its condition.

He said after examining the body he called in Dr. George E. Magrath of Boston, because of his wide experience with murders.

After a preliminary examination he said the body was removed to the Northern Mortuary in Boston, where an autopsy was performed the next day.

FOUND GAG IN THROAT

This autopsy, the witness testified, revealed a small fracture at the base of the skull, five fractures of the jaw, nine lacerations of the head, and the fact that a piece of brocaded cloth had been stuffed in the throat. The cloth, about 18 inches long, had been thrust far down the throat, beyond the larynx.

The witness said the cloth could have caused death, as could the fractured skull and loss of blood.

At the suggestion of Asst. Dist. Atty. Flynn, the next witness, Detective Murray, began his recital of events with his arrival at New Haven where Thompson surrendered to the police of that city.

He testified he talked with Thompson at New Haven police headquarters and on the way back to Saugus by automobile. The witness said Thompson told him he had gone to his aunt's house on Tuesday morning to do some painting.

HAD FISH DINNER.

Shortly after his arrival, Murray quoted Thompson as saying, Mrs. Wight made remarks disrespectful to the young man's dead mother. A quarrel ensued, but later the nephew and aunt got into her car and drove to Boston to buy paint. On the way home Mrs. Wight bought fish for lunch.

Murray said Thompson told him he killed his aunt after lunch, and that both had been drinking. Asked where he got the blackjack, the defendant said he made it from a piece of lead he got on the railroad, wrapped with tape.

The witness quoted Thompson as admitting he was planning to slay Mrs. Wight as he ate the meal she had prepared.

He said Thompson told him he left the house probably about 3:30 in the afternoon, after taking $4 and some change from his aunt's pocketbook.

MADE A BLACKJACK

Thompson said, according to Murray, he made a blackjack to protect his sister, as a result of attending a rough party with her. He said he wanted to protect her at future parties.

Asked by Asst. Dist. Atty. Flynn if Thompson had told a different story at any time Detective Murray said the defendant gave him another version this morning.

RUDY IS ABSENT ON BIG DAY AT HOME

Songster Goes to Camp as Town Waits; Expected Back for Parade

Westbrook, Me., July 21—"Rudy Vallee Day" began today without Rudy Vallee and with considerable disappointment for 2000 of the homefolks who gathered in Vallee sq. expecting to see Mayor Eugene I. Cummings present keys of the city to the radio crooner.

Rudy was said to be in Lovell at a summer camp with his father and mother.

The crowd waited long and dwindled until all but Mayor Cummings and a faithful few remained. Then they, too, folded their tents and stole away.

There was no word from Vallee, but he was expected to return for the parade, band concert and banquet in his honor scheduled for tonight.

The parade was scheduled to start at 6 p. m. from Rudy's home, down the length of bunting, signdecorated Main st. and back again. With his mother, Rudy was to ride at the head of the march. Military units, city officials and all civic organizations will march.

Of the city's 11,000 inhabitants, only 500 will be able to crowd into the banquet in Rudy's honor at American Legion headquarters tonight. Rudy is a member of the Westbrook post and the legionnaires are doing themselves proud.

Gov. William Tudor Gardiner and Congressman Carroll J. Beede will be the principal speakers at the banquet and some 75 Westbrook girls will be waitresses in order to be near the popular idol.

1 Dead, 1 Hurt as Car Is Forced Off Road

Taunton, July 21 (AP)—Armand Lavoie, 18, today was dead and Osnaldo Pelorin, 18, was in a critical condition at Morton Hospital, as a result of an automobile accident in North Raynham late last night. Both were residents of New Bedford.

The automobile operated by Lavoie crashed into a telephone pole after it had been forced off the road by another machine bearing New Jersey registration plates. Lavoie died instantly. Pelorin's skull was fractured.

Carol Pays Visit to Queen Helen

Bucharest, July 21 (INS)—Further indication of complete reconciliation between King Carol and his divorced wife, Queen Helen, came today with the revelation the king visited the queen incognito at Sinaia castle yesterday.

King Carol's son, Crown Prince Micheal, was present at the meeting, which lasted two hours.

Brigands Shoot One and Loot Train

Vienna, July 21 (AP)—One guard was shot and many passengers were reported wounded by brigands, who held up a train near Contessa. The bandits boarded the train while it was traveling slowly up a grade, cowed passengers and took their money and jewels.

Roosevelt Field, N. Y., July 21 (INS—Lee Gehlback, Little Rock, arrived at Roosevelt Field today at 2:50 p. m., (E. D. T.), winning the Buffalo to New York lap of the all-American flying derby.

Gehlback was the winner of the first hop earlier today from Detroit to Buffalo, setting a fast clip of 203 miles an hour ahead of a strong tail wind.

He continued to show the tail of his speedy Commendaire to the rest of the field of 18, setting a fast pace to make the hop here from Buffalo in exactly 1 hour and 41 minutes.

Negro Gold Star Mothers in Paris

Paris, July 21 (AP)—The first group of American negro gold star mothers to visit France reached Paris today. They received an enthusiastic greeting.

Many of their own people had gathered to welcome them. There also were several hundred French and Americans to cheer the 55 women as they came out of the Invalides station after their trip from Cherbourg.

SHAMROCK OFF AGAIN FOR U. S.

Brixham, Devon, England, July 21 (AP)—The Shamrock V., Sir Thomas Lipton's yacht slipped out of this famous old fishing port early today to resume the voyage to the United States and the contest for the America's cup in September.

The yacht began her transatlantic voyage Saturday, but was forced by rough weather in the channel to take refuge for the night under the lee of the Isle of Wight in Spithead Roads. Another start was made yesterday, but the boat was again forced to seek shelter and remain in this ort last night.

The journey to Newport, R. I., is expected to require about a month.

Barracks at Camp Devens Destroyed

Ayer, July 21 (AP)—Fire early today destroyed two unoccupied barracks, four small bathhouses and a quantity of lumber at Camp Devens. The barracks were situated on the outer road near the area occupied by national guardsmen now in camp.

Tercentenary Pilgrimages—No. 36

THE WIGGLESWORTH PARSONAGE, MALDEN

At 145 Main st., in a busy section of Malden, one finds the birthplace of America's first foreign missionary. He was the Rev. Adoniram Judson, born in the old parsonage while his father occupied the house as pastor of the First Church. A tablet reads:

"The ocean his sepulchre; Converted Burmans; the Burman Bible his monument; his record is on high."

The first house was erected in 1657 a short distance from the present one. In 1640 Abraham Palmer and Robert Hale were given an appointment to lay out more than 200 acres of land in Malden. One of the lots of 20 acres was allotted to John Allen. He disposed of it to John Lewis in 1657. Then the Greens took possession. Finally the Rev. Michael Wigglesworth bought the land where the old house now stands, from John Allen in 1657. He paid to John Allen 13 pounds for more than six acres.

He built the first house, which was burned in 1724. At the time of the fire, the house was occupied by Rev. Joseph Emerson, who had succeeded Rev. Mr. Wigglesworth as parson of the First Church.

The town passed a vote to rebuild the home, and it was finished in 1733. This is the house now standing in excellent condition and competing with apartment houses about it as a modern dwelling. It sets back farther from the street than the neighboring buildings and is attractive in appearance.

The Rev Adoniram Judson went forth from this home in 1800, faring the seas to spread the Gospel when navigation was crude and little was known of heathen lands. He was born in 1788 and his death occurred in 1850.

The house can be reached by Boston Elevated easily.

HEALER DENIES GUILT; DOZEN TO AID HIM

Chicopee, July 21 (AP)—Eugene Champagne, 61, alleged faith healer," arrested Saturday after a state police investigation of his activities, today pleaded not guilty to a charge of illegally practicing medicine, and his case was continued to Saturday.

Bail of $500, which was furnished yesterday, was continued.

A dozen persons from this and other communities who claim to have been helped by Champagne's ministration were in court prepared either to furnish bond for him or to testify in his behalf.

Investigation of Champagne's activities is said to have been brought about by clergymen who had been told of them by parishioners. He has lived here about seven years. In the small house where he lives is a sort of shrine where are deposited crutches, braces and other aids said to have been left there by persons treated by Campagne, who claims to be a member of the "Third Order" of Franciscan Brothers.

VERMONT MAN, 100, DEAD

Readsboro, Vt., July 21 (AP)—Hubbard D. Oakes is dead at his home here, aged 100 years.

Shortly before his death he declared himself opposed to prohibition, on the ground that it had thrown an inferior grade of liquor on the market and that he had been accustomed to drinking good liquor all his life. Feminine fashions also irked him, for, he said, shorts and bare legs were robbing women of their femininity.

He leaves four children, ten grandchildren and a score of great grandchildren. Nine members of his family, representing three generations, lived with him.

Ex-Convict Target of Gunman in Auto

New York July 21 (AP)—Louis Amberg, 32, twice a convict, was seriously wounded today by gunmen who fired as they passed the car in which he was riding on the lower East Side, the assailants escaped.

Amberg, who would not talk, was said to be a brother of Hyman Amberg, one of three Tombs prisoners who committed suicide in 1926 when their attempted jail break failed.

Blame Fatal Circus Wreck on Truck Bar

Moncton, N. B., July 21 (AP)—A truck arch bar failing beneath a car was blamed today by Canadian National Railway officials for the wreck of a circus train in which four persons were killed and 20 injured yesterday.

The derailed train was a special carrying the Al G. Barnes circus from Newcastle to Charlottetown.

Deaf Mute, Clubbed by Policeman, Dies

Philadelphia, July 21 (AP)—John McDonald, a 21-year-old deaf mute, died today from a fractured skull, said to have been inflicted by a policeman who is alleged to have struck the youth with his club on July 13.

McDonald, police said, was intoxicated on the day of the alleged assault.

KNABENSHUE REVIEWS C.M.T.C.

Camp Devens, July 21—With all the vim and snap of regulars, the C. M. T. C. student regiment passed in review before Col. Frederick A. Knabenshue, camp commander, and several thousand relatives and friends yesterday afternoon.

Just prior to the parade, 32 students were awarded ribbons for winning battalion honors in swimming contests conducted under the direction of Chaplain Edward T. McNally. Capt. H. B. Dawson and Capt. J. J. Kelly pinned the ribbons on the victorious youngsters.

PRIZES AWARDED

The award of the ribbons was the first of a series of similar events. Several hundred tokens of prowess in various athletic events will be given to students capturing first, second and third places in the scheduled sports competition. The regimental swimming meet is to be held later, the winners to receive gold medals.

During the review, the student officers and non-coms, proud of their ability and conscious of their responsibility, snapped out their commands and led their companies in a manner that won commendation from the seasoned veterans of the regular army.

Belt Whirls Man to Death in Roxbury

Caught in a revolving belt and whirled into the air, Victor F. Malin, 47, of 16 Alberta st., West Roxbury, was killed at the plant of the West Roxbury Trap Rock Co., 10 Grove st., today. Malin, engineer and foreman, was examining the belt when his arm was caught and torn from the socket. G. Frank Ryan of 12 Welch rd., and Alfred De Petro of 27 North Bennett st., fellow employes, took him to Forest Hills hospital where he was pronounced dead.

Hold Trio Caught Dismantling Auto

Caught dismantling an auto which they did not own in the rear of the Liberty Motor Mart, Washington st., Newton, according to police, three Chelsea and Everett youths were arrested today on charges of larceny. Police said they had a horse and wagon and were out to collect junk. They gave their names as Patsy Farni, 17, of Everett ave., Chelsea, Thomas Weldron, 16, of Chelsea st., Everett, and Joseph Panarese, 15, of Chelsea st. They will be arraigned tomorrow.

Somersault Auto's Driver Gets Jail

Gordon J. Cooke of Saratoga st., East Boston, driver of a car which overturned twice in Chelsea st., Charlestown, yesterday, after it struck two other autos, was sentenced to two months in the House of Correction today by Judge Sullivan in Charlestown court for operating so as to endanger Ines McDonald of Valley ave., Medford, was injured on the head in the triple collision.

Philippines Fight Roosevelt as Envoy

Manila, July 21 (AP)—The Philippine Senate today unanimously adopted a resolution protesting against the nomination by President Hoover of Nicholas Roosevelt as vice-governor of the islands. The resolution cited portions of his book, "The Philippines: A Treasure and Problem," and charged Roosevelt was prejudiced against the Filipinos and Orientals generally.

Blast in Church Kills 1; 2 Burned

Asheville, Ala., July 21 (AP)—Explosion of a gasoline lighting system in a church five miles from here last night caused the death of a child, serious burns to two adults and minor injuries to a dozen others in a stampede to the exits.

Priest Blessing Autos in Parish

Pittsburgh, July 21 (AP)—Automobiles of the parishoners of the Church of the Immaculate Conception are being given the blessing of St. Christopher, patron saint of travelers, by Fr. Bonaventure.

1 DEAD, 87 HURT IN CAIRO RIOT

Cairo, Egypt, July 21 (AP)—One rioter was killed, 87 injured, 27 seriously, by gunfire and missiles during severe rioting which climaxed the political situation here today.

With troops, civil police and excited students by thousands struggling for the upper hand along principal streets of Cairo great damage to property was caused.

The rioting crowds, furious when news spread that the followers of former Premier Nahas Pasha had called off their proposed "outlaw" Parliament session, ripped up lamp-posts, barricaded a street with every obstruction they could lay hands on and set fire to an escaping gas column which, however, the police extinguished after a severe attack which dispersed the students.

Malden Mansion Sold for $100

The Marcus Beebe mansion at Pleasant st. and Highland ave., which was assessed for $18,000 before the city took the property as a school site and which was one of the show places of the city has been sold to Alexander J. McKay for $100.

A Saugus wrecking concern bid a similar amount and the third and last bidder offered the city $1 for the mansion.

The wedding of Alderman George J. Moran of Ward 2, Somerville, and Miss Sarah C. Murphy, Telephone Exchange supervisor and daughter of David F. Murphy, will take place tomorrow morning at 8:30 o'clock in St. Joseph's Church, Somerville.

Mayor John J. Murphy will be best man and Miss Mae Murphy, sister of the bride, will be bridesmaid.

Couple Win $3500 From Mayor Stone

Greenfield, July 21 (AP)—Mrs. Elsie M. Haskell of Shutesbury was awarded damages of $2500 and her husband Clayton A., $1300 damages, against Mayor Albert L. Stone of Gardner, by a jury in Superior court today.

Mrs. Haskell sued for $10,000 and her husband for $3000 for injuries sustained, they contended, in a collision with Mayor Stone's automobile at Lunenburg.

Big Bear Loses Life When He Attempts Tree-Sitting Stunt

Chicago, July 21 (AP)—A big black bear started a tree-sitting contest all by himself yesterday and got himself shot dead.

He weighed 300 pounds and no one seems to know where he came from. He was sitting in a tree in Melrose park.

Police were called. When the big bear saw them, he lumbered down.

One policeman, deciding it was better, perhaps, to die from bear bite than from heat prostration, let the big brute have a few bullets. The bear decided to get back in the tree.

The policemen thereupon dispatched him definitely.

3 TOTS KILLED, PUT IN POOL

Martinsburg, W. Va., July 21 (AP)—The bodies of the three little children of Mr. and Mrs. Taylor Hott, Martinsburg, apparently killed and buried into the waters of a quarry hole near here, were discovered by fou boys today.

The parents said they had placed the children in the care of a family named Kidwell for a vacation in the mountains. Authorities began seeking the Kidwells although they expressed doubt that such a family lived in this county.

The children had been strangled by strips of cloth drawn tightly about their throats. Physicians said the bodies had been in the water about eight hours.

Boy, 16, Is Killed on Roller Coaster

New Bedford, July 21—Norman E. Banbores, 16, of 123 Sluit st., Fall River, was killed yesterday when he fell from the front seat of a roller coaster at Lincoln Park to the track of the coaster, where three cars passed over him.

Banbores had been swimming for several hours before taking the ride and had passed almost around the course when he toppled from the seat. The drop to the tracks was only a couple of feet, but the rest of the cars on the roller coaster train ran over him.

'Come Down!' Says Chicago to This-and-Thatters

Chicago, July 21 (AP)—The law shook an angry fist at endurance this-and-thatters today and shouted up at young Chicago to come down out of the tree.

There was a conference called today between juvenile and probation officers to see what could be done. Meantime the department of health was beginning to get worked up about the business.

While the law was unwinding its red tape with a view to lassoing the tree sitters, et cetera, the beaming sun was beating them to it, driving the enduring adolescents from the tree tops and into comparative coolness of their homes.

The health department announced tree-sitting contests were apt—if carried too far—to result in physical breakdowns. It pointed out that permits from the department are necessary for public exhibitions in which life and limb are endangered.

The law had a trump—the curfew ordinance—which requires that children under 17 must be off the street between 10 p. m. and 6 a. m.

Home Brew Blows, Man Loses Life

Chicago, July 21 (AP)—A bottle of home brew exploded in the hands of William Hayes last night, killing him. A piece of glass severed an artery in his arm and he bled to death.

Prohibition Quiz for Candidates

Candidates for election to Congress from Massachusetts are quizzed as to their stand on the repeal of federal and State prohibition in a letter sent out by the Constitutional Liberty League, State branch of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment.

The letter appearing over the signature of the president, Charles S. Rackeman, characterizes the wet-dry question as the most important confronting the electorate and asserts that the time has passed when the people will be satisfied with a mere generalization on law enforcement.

THREE ACCUSED OF WRECKING EXPRESS

Elizabeth, N. J., July 21 (US)—Manslaughter charges were placed yesterday against three men accused of causing the wreck of the Pennsylvania Railroad express in Elizabeth Saturday night in which 58 persons were injured, one fatally.

John Craig, of 148 McDougal st., Brooklyn, died in Elizabeth General hospital yesterday from a fractured skull and internal injuries.

Police held the three men with out bail. They are identified as the occupants of the automobile which was driven onto the tracks at De Hart pl., a few seconds before the express, bound from Philadelphia to New York, came speeding through South Elizabeth at 10:40 p. m.

The train carried the auto 1000 feet past the South Elizabeth station to a trestle over Pearl st. There the locomotive struck a signal "gantry" and turned over. Two coaches plunged down the 20-foot embankment to the street. A sheet of flame flared high in the air and from the coaches came the screams of panic-stricken passengers.

The three men held are Arthur Allcroft, 33, of 25 Elmora ave., Elizabeth, a building contractor; his brother, James, 31, a school teacher in Iowa; and William McNair, 34, of 763 Linden ave., Elizabeth. They will be given a hearing this morning in Elizabeth police court.

Last Man Drinks Toast to 33 Chairs in Crepe

Stillwater, Minn., July 21 (AP)—Thirty-three vacant chairs, draped in black, stood as silent sentinels around a banquet table today, witnesses that Charley Lockwood will carry out the covenant of the Last Man's Club.

Lockwood, 87, is the last man, and today the club's only law required of him was what he considered the hardest task of his life, the dramatic labor of drinking a toast to 33 Civil War comrades who died and left him with the honor he has found empty.

Before each chair stood a bouquet. Before Lockwood's plate was placed the bottle of Old Burgundy, which the clun set aside at its formation in 1885 for just this event, but the wine, like the honor, has soured and a sip of it was all that Lockwood asked to keep his pledge. Tonight the bottle will be turned over to an historical society.

Lockwood and his fellows were survivors of Co. B, First Minnesota Volunteer Infantry, and today's banquet, like those each year before, was on the anniversary of the First Battle of Bull Run.

Ordinance Barring Mixed Bathing Killed

London, July 21 (US)—A male bather at Lowestoft may now approach within 100 yards of a female bather, or even closer if he is daring.

There was recently a hearty laugh at the Lowestoft town council's expense when the city fathers quite seriously went about sholting an ordinance of 1854, which required men bathers to keep 100 yards of water between them and any women companions.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT

Editor, Boston American:

Even the police aren't safe at the crossing at Jamaicaway and South st., near the Forest Hills railroad station, one of the busiest traffic points in the city. A motorcycle officer was knocked from his machine and seriously injured Thursday morning by a woman auto driver.

If the police haven't a chance at that corner, think what little chance a mother with a baby carriage has of crossing the intersection.

Superintendent Crowley has been appealed to on at least one occasion to place a traffic officer at the spot on all day duty, but has only placed an officer there during the time school is letting out and when the daily trains stop at the Forest Hills station. What chance has a mother got to push a baby carriage across the street to get to the Arboretum, one of Boston's beauty spots? The answer is, no chance at all.

Traffic Commissioner Conry came to the aid of the churches in the vicinity in an attempt to regulate traffic. Why can't he come to the aid of the mothers?

Park Commissioner Long has kept up the record of keeping the Arnold Arboretum one of the beauty spots of the world, but the mothers of the city will have little opportunity to enjoy it with their children unless the police come to their aid. How about it?

A JAMAICA PLAIN RESIDENT.

Favors Release of Pomeroy, Famous Lifer

Editor Boston American:

I read with interest the article submitted to your column regarding Jesse Pomeroy, famous lifer. I for one believe that he should be released. I would like to remind Mr. W. P. Connelly that Pomeroy is not as ferocious as he would have us believe. On the contrary he is very pleasant. I don't think he would frighten children either—no more than the ordinary man. As for him being hanged long ago by the state, I don't believe in it, and neither do countless others.

Points Out Chance to Aid Unemployed of City

Editor Boston American:

The positions of wardens, clerks and inspectors, in the primaries and elections in Boston and the state should be given to men who need the work and not as often is the case to those who do not need the money paid for such work.

Give the work to men who are out of work and who need it.

There are enough of such men competent and intelligent enough to do the work.

Thanks American for Editorial on Elks

Editor Boston American:

Please accept my sincere thanks as a member of the Benton Locke of Elks, including our other brother members of the Order, for the wonderful editorial that we read recently in the Boston American. You certainly did a wonderful job, and it would be a wonderful thing if other newspapers in this town did likewise.

Again thanking you, and wishing you the best of luck, I am with kindest regards,

Sincerely yours,

Women Should Stand for Ideals

Editor Boston American:

Congratulations to the reader who signed herself as Mother. Her opinion of the modern girl is perfect and excellent. In my opinion the modern woman (if she is really entitled to be called a woman) is like a stray bird that has been locked up in a cell all her life. The modern woman is a coward. She is afraid to face life in the manner becoming a woman. Don't think because a woman can fly in an airplane, drive an auto, and swear, smoke, drink, etc., that she is an heroine. She is just the opposite.

Women should stand for ideals—and those ideals should influence the men. And in that way can we have a combination of love and happiness. It is not the girls whose pictures are in the papers for beauty contests and flying in airplanes that are really worthy, but rather women like nurses in hospitals, mothers of children, and hard working girls with ideals of the future who are the real leaders of womanhood.

Give me any time one girl who honors her mother and father, than a dozen or two dozen girls like night club and dance hall hounds.

Is it any wonder why old age is so miserable to thousands upon thousands of women today? The answer is because those women, when young (in most cases), elected for their life partners some "loud speakers" and forgot all about love, happiness, home and financial independence. That's the trouble with most girls today. Give them some "man" who wears earrings or has beautiful eyebrows, or knows how to speak loud in the crowd—and they immediately "fall" for them. But woe is them after a few years of married life when they have to pay bills from every description in existence. Yes! Woe is them.

Mann's Fame Will Live Forever in Boston

Editor Boston American:

Horace Mann has recently been placed in the Hall of Fame, New York city.

This is interesting for Massachusetts, where he was born at Franklin, and practiced law some time in Dedham. He was president of the Senate, reorganized the common school system, refused to be Governor of Massachusetts and finally became deeply interested in education, which was his forte. You will find his name marking a closed school building, corner of Newbury and Exeter sts., Boston, but a new building in another locality testifies that Boston has not forgotten this great educator.

Questions Judgment on Insanity Cases

Editor Boston American:

Recently in the probate court of Boston, a man's will was declared void, because when he made it he was insane.

Who can assert who is insane? Of course, I know very well, there are evident symptoms of this disease, but some symptoms claim too much in the hands of experts.

In New York city, it was announced that the ultimate test for insanity is one's certainty that he is right everytime about everything. A sane man always knows when he is mistaken. It is too bad that we have no permanent standards for being insane. Much is judged by speculation. Of course, I am not referring to special types of cases which no one questions but the cases here alluded to are beyond human skill so far.

Terms Many Graduate Students Drifters

Editor Boston American:

A great many of the graduate students attending summer schools around Boston are just drifters. They do not know what to do. They want some one to direct them. They have a good stock of education, but they do not know how to unload it. They get so in the habit of attending lectures in colleges and making daily recitations that they find the summer school more to their liking than hunting for a job to expand their talents.

Get out of your attending-lectures-habit! Work on a farm for a time with a hoe in the hot sun or become a clerk in a summer hotel.

Do anything to bring out the worth of your accumulated capital of education. Don't invest so much of it in yourself. Get others to invest in you.

A TEACHER.

FOOD BUDGET FOR FOUR NOW $13 A WEEK

Chicago, July 21 (AP)—A family of four can live well this summer for $13 a week, according to a summer food budget based on current prices made public today by the American Research Foundation.

"An average of $13.72 a week spent for food will provide the family of four with all the nutritional elements necessary to physical well-being and yield intriguing summer menus," asserts a bulletin from the Foundation.

"Many staples are from 20 to 40 per cent below their 1929 prices, while fresh fruits and vegetables offer chances to trim tidy sums off the food budget," the bulletin says.

The housewife is urged by the foundation to buy in as large quantities as possible and to watch newspaper advertisements closely.

Crazed Caretaker Kills Two and Self

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., July 21 (AP)—An enraged caretaker of a Lehman Heights estate, near here, shot his employer and a deputy sheriff to death, wounded two other persons and then took his own life when cornered by a posse yesterday.

Those killed by the crazed caretaker, Paul Skopka, were Harry D. Sordoni, 52, of Kingston, owner of the estate, and John T. Ruth, 50, chief of police of Harvey's Lake and deputy sheriff of Luzerne county.

Sordoni's 17-year-old daughter, Frieda, was shot in both arms and his son, Francis, 25, was wounded in the right hip and legs.

25 Hurt in Panic on Coney Island Train

New York, July 21 (AP)—Twenty-five persons were injured in a panic after a fuse blew out in the first car of a crowded elevated train in Brooklyn last night.

The train was jammed with people returning home from Coney Island. When the fuse blew out, sending a sheet of flame along the top of the car and filling it with smoke, women and girls fainted and were trampled in the rush for the car exits.

Store Executives Discuss Fashions

By a Staff Correspondent

New York, July 21—"Don't expect any fashion revolutions this fall. There won't be any. Women are interested in the evolution of the present fashions, not in starting any fashion revolutions," Amos Parrish, leading fashion authority, told the owners and executives of 127 leading department stores and specialty shops, here today in the opening session of the semi-annual Fashion Merchandising Clinic.

"Fashion has pretty well decided where she is going and where she wants to be. Last year she wasn't sure. This year she is. She knows exactly what she wants to do about hemlines, skirt lengths, waistlines and other fashion details.

"Last year fashion was in a transition stage. Fashions were changing from the boyish, flapper type to the more feminine more individual costume. But there were still many of the old boyish, flapperish features that had not disappeared. Some of the clothes looked like a little girl's party dress, all fixed up with lots of laces and ruffles.

TRANSITION PERIOD

"Last year hemlines and skirt lengths did not know where to go or what to do. Some hemlines were longer on one side or longer in back. Others had a jagged and ragged appearance.

"Dress lengths then were all lengths from above the knee to the ankle. Lots of dresses did not know whether they were daytime dresses, afternoon dresses or evening dresses.

"In this same transition period waistlines were sometimes below normal, at normal and above normal. And they often were in the wrong place on the wrong dress," Amos Parrish explained.

"Last year fashion wanted to be individual, but she didn't quite know how to get that way. Now she knows how. And she likes being individual. So she doesn't need to worry any longer.

FASHIONS FOR FALL

"Our fashion analysis proves that the fashions for fall will be individual in moderation. Women will still wear the bolero and some of the Gibson Girl shirt-waist costumes, the Victorian jacket and the Empress Josephine dress, but they will be modified and adapted to fit in with the important fashion themes for fall.

"In other words, she won't look like the Gibson Girl or the Spanish bull-fighter with his bolero, or Empress Josephine or Queen Victoria, even though she uses these fashion ideas. She will look like the modern, well-dressed 1930 woman of fashion should look."

The program of the four-day Fashion Merchandising Clinic includes an outline of the important fashion trends for fall and winter, a review of the leading fashions in cloth and fur coats, dresses, millinery, shoes, hosiery, handbags, gloves and jewelry, and recommendations to stores for the buying and selling of fashion goods.

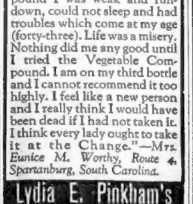
HUB STORES REPRESENTED

Methods of merchandising apparel and accessories, of gathering and reporting fashion information, recommendations for advertising and displaying fashion goods, for co-ordinating and ensembling fashion merchandise will be presented by Amos Parrish and members of his fashion organization.

Special sessions will be held for merchandise and sales promotion managers of stores, for fashionists, personnel directors and for sales and advertising managers.

Among the leading stores and groups of stores represented in the Amo Parrish Fashion Clinic are: Marshall Field & Co., Chicago; William Filene's Sons Co., Boston; Flint and Kent, Buffalo; Shawbridge and Clothier, Philadelphia; The Namm Store, Brooklyn; The J. L. Hudson Co., Detroit; McCurdy & Co., Rochester; James McCutcheon & Co., New York; Davison Paxon Co., Atlanta, also Elder and Johnson Co., Dayton; The Emporium, St. Paul; Hale Bros. Stores, San Francisco; R. H. Stearns Co., Boston; the Dayton Co., Minneapolis; Carson Pirie Scott, Chicago; Conrad & Co., Boston; Frederick Loeser & Co., Brooklyn; the Robert Simpson Co., Montreal; Sage-Allen Co., Hartford.

One of the new fall coat fashions, shown at the Amos Parrish Merchandising Clinic, in New York, July 21-25. The coat, of bright red velvet woolen with black sealskin collar, illustrates the new fashion of coats that fit and look like dresses. No longer are winter coats to be bulky and heavy looking. This coat has a bolero, double sleeves, buckled belt and wrap around skirt. The upstanding collar is about as narrow as a dress collar. The hat is one of the new double brims, red to match the coat. Handbag and shoes are of black suede to match the sealskin fur.



Life Was a Misery

AXEMAN KILLS 3, FIRES HOUSE

Chicago, July 21 (AP)—Charles A. Anderson, well-to-do farmer, his wife and their 18-year-old son were hacked to death with an axe or hatchet in their farm home near Lake Geneva early today, and the house set afire to hide the crime.

The flames aroused neighbors who arrived in time to save the house. Breaking into the dwelling they found the body of Anderson, 55, across his bed, hacked about the head and body.

In another room was Willis, the son, similarly wounded, but still alive. On the floor of the living room lay Mrs. Anderson, her wrists and throat cut. Beside her lay a hatchet.

The son died without regaining consciousness. The mattress of his bed, as well as the bed of Anderson, had been set afire. A brother of Mrs. Anderson is held.

408 LIVES LOST IN JAPAN STORM

Tokyo, July 21 (AP)—Torrential rains and terrific winds today had claimed toll of at least 408 lives and devastated huge areas in southern Japan and Korea, laying waste property valued by conservative Tokyo newspapers at millions of dollars.

In one area alone, Kiushiu Island, at the foot of the Japanese empire, property damage reached $50,000,000. Other districts reported great damage from storms of the last two weeks, but official figures were lacking.

DON'T LET GO THE ROPE WHEN THE PULLING GETS A LITTLE HARDER

THE first half of 1930 has made it crystal clear to all of us that the second half must not be one of inaction. The next six months will place a premium on hard work, extra energy, extra selling effort.

Let those whose tendency in such times is to slacken their hold on the rope recall the experience of advertisers in 1921. That year revealed clearly the vigorous relation between sustained advertising and sustained sales. The major and wiser advertisers of the country, profiting by this experience, have increased their advertising schedules to meet present conditions.

Boston and New England, forming one of the most compact and wealthy markets of America, offer tremendous selling rewards to those advertisers alert enough to make the effort to win them. There has rarely been a time when merchants could publish advertisements and consumers could read them with more profit. Values at retail are greater than at any time during the last decade. Retail stores are either reducing prices or giving greater value at the same price.

What better time for merchants to advertise! What better time for consumers to buy!

Are you a victim of bad "summer slump" psychology?

Monthly fluctuations in factory employment in all industries.

A charting of the monthly variations in the number of persons employed in factories throughout the United States reveals that employment during July and August averages about 100% or normal. The above chart shows the ratio of factory employment based on the monthly figures for the past three years, the average month equalling 100. Similar figures for Massachusetts alone would not vary in any significant degree. July and August are practically normal.

Saratoga Association Issues List of Boxholders for August Racing

THE SARATOGA ASSOCIATION has just issued a list of clubhouse box-holders who will entertain at the coming races which take place during the month of August. The first event is scheduled for July 30 and the closing race will be on August 30. Mr. John McE. Bowman is the moving spirit of these events.

MANY BOSTONIANS ARE planning to enter their stables, among whom are Mr. Augustus F. Goodwin, Mr. Bayard Tuckerman of Hamilton, Mr. William Woodward of New York, brother-in-law of Mrs. F. Lathrop Ames, who will show in the ring. Mrs. Graham Fair Vanderbilt, mother of Mrs. Vanderbilt Church, Mr. Charles M. Amory, Mr. William Stackpole, formerly of Boston, Mr. John R. Macomber, whose private race track at Framingham has made history on the amateur turf and Mrs. Edward M. Weld.

Cabaret Planned on South Shore to Aid Church at Cohasset

A CABARET IS BEING planned for August on the South Shore for the benefit of St. Stephen's Church at Cohasset. It is announced for Friday evening, August 8, in the new school building. Mr. Hugh Bancroft has been chosen as announcer, and Mr. Russell Dean is chairman of the executive committee. A large group of South Shore residents will provide the talent. Mrs. Conover Fitch is to take charge of the tickets, and Miss Jane Bancroft of the entertainment.

REFRESHMENTS WILL BE under the supervision of Mrs. F. Willard Tuckerman, Jr., and the hall decorations will be in charge of Mrs. Thomas M. James. Mrs. Albert A. Harding will attend to the table decorations, and Mr. Harding will look after the advertising. Others interested in the success of the affair are Mrs. J. E. Grinfield-Coxwell, Mr. David Reed and Mrs. E. Clarence Hovey, Jr., who will have charge of the waitresses.

MISS PEGGY CREIGHTON of Swampscott is entertaining Miss Evelyn Ames of North Easton during the annual tennis match at Tedesco Club, which begins today. Mr. Peaxel Dawn is also at the Creightons for the tournament. Miss Creighton gave a dinner for several of the players at the club Saturday, and on Friday evening Mr. Sam Batchelder entertained the entrants at his home. The regular tennis dance will take place tomorrow at the club.

Princess Honored Guest at Numerous North Shore Fetes

PRINCESS CANTACUZENE (Clarissa Curtis), daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Pelham Curtis of Nahant and Boston, has been extensively entertained during her visit with her parents at Nahant. Prince Cantacuzene is a grandson of Gen. U. S. Grant, and he will come on from Chicago the latter part of August to make a short visit and escort his beautiful wife back to their winter home.

THE COUNT AND COUNTESS SZECHENYI, who are staying with the Countess' mother at Newport, were visitors to Boston during the past week. They attended the Tercentenary celebration and the official dinner where Count Szechenyi was one of the honored foreign diplomats at the affair.

MISS MARJORIE FULLER will also be one of the autumn brides, September 6 being the probable date of her marriage to Mr. David S. M. Lanier of New York. Miss Fuller is spending the summer with her mother, Mrs. Henry H. Fuller at the Chatham Bars Inn on Cape Cod.

Clubwomen to Have Prominent Part in Washington Fete

When the 200th anniversary of the birth of George Washington takes place in 1932, the clubwomen of the country will have a conspicuous share in the celebration. The General Federation is to request the two and a half million clubwomen to adopt the resolution, endorsed by the parent organization, and sponsor programs that will reveal episodes in the life of the Father of Our Country, not alone for adult club members, but for the children of the communities.

Miss Jane Powning Weds Edward Gates Early in September

MISS JANE POWNING, whose engagement to Mr. Edward S. Gates was recently announced, is to be one of the early fall brides. The event will take place early in September and Miss Powning will be the first of the 1929-30 group of debutantes to be married. Mr. Gates graduated from Harvard last month.

MRS. WILLIAM M. ELKINS of Elkins Park, Pa., has arrived with her daughter, Miss Elizabeth Wolcott Elkins, at their summer home at Dark Harbor, Me. Miss Elkins' engagement to Mr. Harry B. Hollins, 3d, of New York, has just been announced. Mr. Hollins will be graduated from Harvard next June after which the wedding will take place.

MRS. RICHARD HUBBARD (Betty Moulton) opened her house at Hamilton Saturday afternoon for a tea in connection with the Tercentenary exercises. The pourers were Mrs. Alexander Shaw, Mrs. Gordon Abbott, Jr., and Miss Betty Barrell. The home of Mrs. Hubbard was built in the early 18th century and is one of the historic landmarks of the town of Hamilton.

Al Smith Building to Be World's Highest

New York, July 21 (US)—In order to make it the tallest structure in the world, plans have been altered so that the building on the site of the old Waldorf-Astoria Hotel will be one-fifth higher than anything ever built by man.

This announcement was made by former Governor Smith, president of the Empire State Incorporated, engaged in building the structure at 34th st. and Fifth ave. The building, including the Zeppelin mooring mast, will be equivalent to 102 stories, 1248 feet from the street level.

Hub Girls In Fall Bridals

By CHOLLY KNICKERBOCKER
Universal Service Society Editor

New York, July 21—Claribel M. Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. Morton Smith of Boston is to become the bride of William Beekman Van Alstyne, Jr., on September 5 in Boston, and Caroline Read has chosen September 27 as the date on which she will assume matrimonial honors as the bride of Frances Appleton.

Announcement of Claribel's betrothal to the son of the senior Mr. and Mrs. Van Alstyne of Kinderhook, N. Y., was made on May 3. The bride-to-be is a graduate of the May school and of Radcliffe college. She made her debut in the fall of 1924 and has to her credit membership in the Junior League of Boston.

Young Van Alstyne is a graduate of Philips Andover academy and received his sheepskin from Princeton university with the class of '27. He is at present director of personnel at the latter seat of learning.

The forthcoming wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Wilson Read's daughter to the son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles L. Harding of Dedham, Mass., is calling forth much polite comment at Newport, where the Hardings pass the summers and are prominently identified with the Acquidneck Isle colony.

Miss Read and her parents divide their time between their home at Cambridge, Mass., and their torrid season abode, Leelands, at Egypt, Mass., and her wedding on September 27 will call many of her relatives and friends and those of her fiance from their summer retreats, to Cambridge, where the ceremony will be solemnized.

N. E. Conference Will Be Held at New London in September

By invitation of the Connecticut State Federation of Women's Clubs, the 21st annual session of the New England conference of women's clubs will be held September 8, 9 and 10 at the New Griswold, Eastern Point, New London, Ct.

The invite comes through the state president, Miss Emily Louise Plumley, who is co-operating with Mrs. Omeron D. Coolidge of Rutland, Vermont., president of the conference, her officers and her board in arranging the program and welcome that will be the assurance of the hearty support of the new administration.

Massachusetts takes pride in claiming the vice-chairmanship of the conference, Mrs. Edwin L. Pride of Somerville. The secretary-treasurer is Miss Anna C. Witherle of Castine, Me.

What the New England council is to the business men of New England, the New England Conference of Women's Clubs is to the clubwomen, both joining hands in writing a successful future for the six states so vitally concerned.

Members of the council will address the women's conference, bringing to them the latest reports and findings of the New England council with suggestions for help from the clubwomen.

More Money Sought for Bureau of Home Economics Program

Now that a housewife has achieved such distinction as to be listed in the census as a "home-maker," clubwomen are going still further in their desires. Bay State clubwomen will pursue, in favorable answer to the General Federation resolution, to work for the enlargement of appropriation of the bureau of home economics in the department of agriculture to make possible research for the establishment of additional standards adapted to the household.

Mrs. Carl L. Schrader, president of the Massachusetts federation, will consider this one of the important pursuits in her newly acquired helmship.

Club Women Wage War on Billboards

Federation Report Tells How They Are Fighting for Restriction

By NANCY BREWSTER

Women of the country represent 85 per cent of the purchasing power and they will have their way.

If clubwomen ever are to achieve beautiful roads free from billboards they must make three demands, Mrs. W. L. Lawton, chairman, committee on rural and highway advertising in the General Federation of Women's Clubs, has informed the State Federations:

Demand beautiful roadsides.
Demand roadsides free from advertising.
Favor firms that favor the scenery.

For the past few years Mrs. Lawton has battled, and with partial success, against the defamation of the roadsides by glaring advertising, hot dog stands and those sore spots that motorists encounter as they travel the highways between cities and towns and states.

SOME SUCCESS

Clubwomen throughout the country have loaned a hand and results are now slowly coming to maturity.

"America is fast becoming roadside conscious," Mrs. Lawton points out, in her report to the affiliated clubs of the General Federation.

"The elimination of billboards along rural roads is the most vital phase of the roadside improvement. Do not be fooled. Creating beauty along our highways will not of itself banish the billboards, any more than planting flowers will kill the weeds. You can get rid of billboards only by active campaigns in every state and community. The longer you wait the stronger the weed. Each year the billboard industry entrenches itself more strongly with powerful groups in our legislatures and political machines.

"Favor firms which favor scenery. She who desires beautiful highways will not patronize willboards. Buy your gas from the good-looking stations. Buy your food from the attractive stands. Buy products not advertised on the landscape."

A year ago the General Federation, in biennial conference at Swampscott passed a resolution urging members to give consideration to firms not advertising on the landscape. The weight of this request, Mrs. Lawton points out, was so strong that over half the states have reported similar action.

WILL MAKE REPORT

Not in the nature of a boycott, it was a voluntary pledge on the part of the clubwomen when they signed cards to the effect that they would patronize those firms which favored the scenery at the New England Conference of State Federations last September in Rhode Island.

"Never before were so many women actively fighting for billboard restriction," continues Mrs. Lawton. "Women are determined to keep billboards in commercial districts. Women buy 85 per cent of all products. They will have their way."

Mrs. Frank Stewart of Newton and prominent in the Massachusetts State Federation of Women's Clubs is watching the test cases on billboards now pending in the Supreme Court. At the September conference in Connecticut, it is expected that she will make a complete report on the findings.

Summer Coats That Wear In Demand

By ANN ARDEN

Model from C. F. Hovey Co.

LIKE SO MANY good fashions of recent years, summer coats have risen gallantly to the diverse roles which they are called upon to play. To expect one coat to make a summer is almost as foolish as to expect one bird to do the same—but by clever shopping one can minimize coat expenditures and let a coat serve more than one purpose. The well rounded clothes list should admit at least three coats—one for strictly informal use, one for street and a third for the evening.

COATS HAVE A very important niche in summer affairs—like frocks they are tabulated for the occasions at which they appear. For sportswear or general country use there is the polo coat in its variations of fabrics and colors. There is Chanel's Palm Beach successes, the redingote, which comes in silk, cottons, or wool. And of course there are all the tweeds and homespuns that find great favor for both spectator and active use.

THE LIGHT WOOL coat is another fashion that comes to town in the summer. This coat may be fur trimmed or not according to taste—but it usually is a bit formal about its detailing.

THE COAT OF WHITE basketweave wool is one of the smartest notes of the summer, and the coat pictured boasts many smart touches—its lower front edges are slightly cut-away, its two large patch pockets cut and stitched in a double oval. The coat is secured at the waistline by a tie belt, its fronts crossing in a becoming surplice line, deeply faced and stitched. A narrow fold of white angora wool forms a becoming flat collar about the neckline.

THE CHIC DRAPED turban is of felt in baby blue, its drapery caught by felt bow in back its front-line softened by crossed bands of grosgrain ribbon the same tone.

IF ONE WOULD believe the theory of the survival of the fittest, there need be no question as to why the turban has fashionably survived so long! It is the one bit of chic headgear that fits itself into every sort of a wardrobe. And even more important is the indisputable fact that turbans are generally becoming—a rare attribute in hats.

* * *

IN THE MIDST of our problems of whether or not felt intends to keep its place of popularity in the fall millinery mode, we find that turbans are becoming increasingly important. This means that soft fabrics will be employed. Soft felt is frequently made into trig little turbans. Velvet, of course, is a favorite material for this small graceful headgear.

Braves Must Fight to Get Out of Slump

DAMON RUNYON SAYS

Copyright, 1930, by Universal Service, Inc.

New York, July 21.

FLYWEIGHT—MIDGET WOLGAST.
BANTAMWEIGHT—AL BROWN.
FEATHERWEIGHT—BATTLING BATTALINO.
LIGHTWEIGHT—AL SINGER.
WELTERWEIGHT—YOUNG JACK THOMSON.
MIDDLEWEIGHT—MICKEY WALKER.
LIGHT HEAVYWEIGHT—MAXEY ROSENBLOOM.
HEAVYWEIGHT—MAX SCHMELING.

For the first time in several semesters, we now have a quorum of fistic champions, such as they are.

I mean to say all the chairs in championship hall are tenanted. 'Tis an unusual spectacle. For a spell we had no flyweight, bantam, light heavy, or heavyweight champions, what with resignations, and one thing and another.

Now we've got a full meeting, and even a waiting list. We have two Jewish title holders in Smacksie Maxie and Al Singer, two negroes in Panama Al Brown and Jack Thompson, Italians in Battalino Ramon Runyon and Wolgast, One German in Schmeling, and one Irishman in Mick Walker.

The synthetic 135 pound, or junior lightweight division, was established by its creators, the New York Boxing Commissioners, after the Ted Morgan-Benny Bass affair. The so-caller junior welterweight title which is claimed by Jack Berg, of England, on the strength of beating Mushy Callahan, has never been recognized to any extent.

Midget Wolgast's flyweight title is disputed by Frankie Genaro, a former title holder, who now spends his time licking foreign claimants to flyweight distinction. But in New York, and other states, Wolgast's claim is considered quite valid. He seems to be a right good little fighter. However, it will take a battle between Wolgast and Genaro to give one or the other an absolutely clear title.

I never cared much for the style of the skinny Panama Negro, Brown, who seems to be accepted as bantam champion, but I don't know of any bantam that can lick him right now. I never saw Battling Battalino, the Connecticut youth, who got his title from Andre Routis, so I cannot pass on his ability.

The outstanding champion in our new list of title holders is Smacksie Maxie. He has belted all those light heavies around, and can do it again any night, and on a rabbit skin. Smackisie Maxie can't punch a lick, but he can everlasting outswarm any 175-pounder in the world.

LEADING CONTENDERS

Having given you the list of champs, I will now present a roster of the leading contenders, as follows, to wit, viz, and namely:

Flyweight: Frankie Genaro.
Bantamweight: Midget Wolgast.
Featherweight: Earl Mastro.
Lightweight: Kid Chocolate.
Welterweight: Young Corbett III.
Middleweight: Rene De Vos.
Light Heavyweight: Mickey Walker.
Heavyweight: Jack Sharkey.

You will note I move two champions, Wolgast and Walker, out of their own divisions to make them contenders in other divisions. I think they can lick most of the bantams around just now, and spot them plenty, if necessary.

That new list of champions isn't a bad layout, at that. We have had much worse. A few years from now the present generation of ringworms will be bringing up most of these names and telling the youngsters of the day what greater fighters they were—yes, even Max Schmeling.

I think Walker is a better fighter at catchweights, which would move him up to Rosenbloom's class, than he is at 160 pounds, the middleweight limit. In fact, I am inclined to think that Mickey would have trouble making his title weight.

If Jimmy McLarnin weighed just about five or six pounds more, I would place him first among the middleweight contenders by several lengths. But McLarnin can easily make the welterweight limit of 147 pounds—that's about enough for him—so he remains a welter.

CHOCOLATE GOOD

But as a welterweight he isn't first of the contenders, because if California southpaw, Young Corbett III, has licked both Jackie Fields and Young Jack Thomson as title holders. True, McLarnin also licked Thomson just before the Los Angeles Negro won the title, but he didn't lick him as decisively as Young Corbett III.

I expect to see Fields a middleweight contender inside of a year. Jack Berg, of England, will probably move into the welterweight class eventually, though he is now matched to meet Kid Chocolate, a featherweight, and if he beats Chocolate, Berg will probably be matched with Singer for the lightweight title.

However, I do not think Berg can beat Chocolate, and if Chocolate as featherweight is superior to a man who claims the junior welterweight title, he must be just about the best fighter of his inches in the world.

Next to Jack Sharkey as heavyweight contender, I place for the moment, Young Stribling of Georgia. The rest are nowhere. Old Phil the Fainter may move into No. 2 position when he fights the king of the cave dwellers in London [illegible]

'Twixt Tee and Cup

By BILL GRIMES

Fred Wright, Jr., five-time winner of the Massachusetts amateur championship, and Jesse Guilford, a former United States and state amateur and state open titleholder, will play in the fifth annual New England amateur championships next month at the Portland, Me., Country Club.

Regardless of the other contestants, the New Englands will be a banner event this year with both Wright and Guilford in action. The announcement that Wright and Guilford had entered the New Englands has created great interest in this championship and in all probability, the Portland Country Club will have the biggest field that has ever competed for this title.

The New England Professional Golfers' Organization and their amateur partners are playing a 36-hole medal play four-ball event today at the Portland Country Club. This tournament will offer the amateur an opportunity to get a line on the Portland links.

The Boston Newspapermen's Golf Association swings back into action today at the Unicorn Country Club. As the scribes have not played as often as usual this season, they will be out in numbers today.

The open tournament players will steer toward the North Shore this week-end, for the Rockport Country Club is holding its annual two day open medal play handicap tourney on Friday and Saturday. Rockport always draws a large field of Greater Boston golfers for this is one of the most enjoyable nine hole courses they play.

Joe Monahan, Sandy Burr, and Dan Riordan, a local product, will battle again for the special prize offered for the longest drive off the first tee during the Rockport open. Joe Monahan has won this event so often that there is rumors that it will be named the Monahan special.

The Tedesco four ball invitation will be played over the new course. It will be the first competitive event ever staged on this recently completed layout. The new course will test the golfing of the most exacting in the state.

In all probability, Joe Batchelder and Mel Merritt will try their hands in the New England at the Portland Country Club. Batchelder is anxious to get in as much competitive golf as possible before the nationals at Merion in September.

Elmer Ward made a wonderful showing in the state championship last week when he went to the semi-finals. Elmer will be a tough one to beat from now on after his success at Peabody. He should go far at Portland for the course is ideal for "Chipper's" game.

The entries for the Massachusetts junior championship, which will be played next week at the Belmont Spring Country Club, will close on Wednesday. Bill Donnelly is going to have the usual amount of trouble defending his title, for in the junior ranks they have no respect for champion. In fact, the youngsters seldom fail to round in their best rounds when opposing the titleholder.

Fred Corcoran did a fine job on the board during the state championship last week. He gave a perfect demonstration of how a score board should be operated. Every detail was posted plainly on the board and it was possible to trace the hole by hole of everyone of the 32 qualifiers.

LOSE CHANCE TO GET INTO 1ST DIVISION

By JOE CASHMAN

The Braves having played the contest scheduled for this afternoon as part of the Sabbath twin-bill, have nothing to do until tomorrow, when they will resume their series with Dan Howley's surprising Cincinnati Reds.

It is to be hoped that the layoff will not affect them the same as the last one did. They started last week by turning back the Cubs twice, loafed on Monday and have won only two out of eight games since.

Joe Cashman

An occasional vacation is great when a team is in a slump, but it is usually disastrous when an outfit is going on high.

The Tribe was all set to jump into the first division following their double triumph over the Cubs but they had lost their stride before swinging into action again two days later. The rest certainly didn't help them and very likely hurt them.

The breathing spell they enjoy today ought to prove beneficial. It will give them an opportunity to forget all about the lickings they have been getting and pull themselves together to start another winning streak.

They must get going very soon if they are to realize their ambition to get into the first division. They had but one team to pass to succeed a week ago. Now they have two between them and the charmed circle and are in danger of being passed by the Reds, who are tied with them for sixth place, having gained four games on them in the last six days.

Weak Pitching Cause of Braves' Slump

The principal trouble with the Braves of late has been weak pitching. Tom Zachary, the only Tribal pitcher to turn in a victory during the past week, and Harry "Socks" Seibold are the only local twirlers to finish a game since the team came home.

The warriors have been hitting and fielding well enough to win at least half of their games with fair hurling.

If Zachary, a veteran of more than a dozen campaigns, can do it, a few of his mound mates ought to be able to win, but they seem to find it impossible.

The Reds blew into town full of confidence and pep after having won 11 out of 12 games and stepped out to hand the natives their fifth straight setback in the first Sunday game.

Zachary, however stopped the invaders in the nightcap even easier than he did the Pirates last Wednesday for the Warriors' only win of the week.

McKechnie Shifts Neun to First

True. Manager Bill McKechnie, in a desperate effort to shake the jinx which had been following the club, sent Johnny Neun to first in place of Sisler, and Earl Clark to right field instead of Richbourg, and the team looked stronger offensively than for some time, but Zachary didn't need the extra help. He allowed ten hits, but kept them well scattered, gave only one pass, and fanned five of the enemy. The lone run entered him was a four-base wallop into the left field stands by Long Bob Meusel.

Neun and Clark were sent in mainly because they are right-handed batters, and Jakie May, a southpaw, started for the Reds.

STARS OF ST MARK'S H. N. S. BALL TEAM

John Cummings, c. f.

CUMMINGS, center fielder of the St. Mark's nine, is a former all-around star of Mechanic Arts high school.

Ed Towle, 1 b.

Ed Mulligan, p.

ED MULLIGAN formerly hurled for Dorchester High, and is one of the best boxmen in semi-pro ranks.

ST. MARK'S HAS STRONG NINE

One of the most successful semi-pro nines in Greater Boston is the St. Mark's Holy Name Society of Dorchester. Three factors contribute to the success of the St. Mark's nine. It is made up entirely of local boys who have been playing together for a number of years and a faithful following of royal rooters has been built up by their consistently good baseball.

To the Rev. Father Dalton of St. Mark's Church and to Ray Finnegan, who has coached them for four years, goes most of the credit.

St. Mark's won the championship of the Dorchester Twilight League by two victories over the teams leading the league, the Dorchester A. A. and the Madden Club.

Eddie Mulligan, former Dorchester High pitcher, Johnny Cummings, a former all-round star at Mechanics Arts, and Eddie Towle of Dorchester are three of the stars.

Fran Finnegan, brother of the coach and a B. C. boy, Joe Sullivan of Dorchester High and Dean, George Weddleton of Latin School, Toddy Cummings, two-sport star at Dorchester High.

ENGLAND FINDS NEW 'CARNERA'

London, July 21 (INS)—The "English Carnera," if not the future heavyweight champion of the world, has been discovered, according to Trevor C. Wignall, famous sports writer.

John Pettifer is the name of the man discovered and he is 100 per cent English. He stands 7ft inches, weighs 242 pounds, has a reach of 82 inches and is 21 years old. Until two months ago, he was a dish washer in a London hotel.

"I am ready to declare," says Wignall, "that Pettifer is a much more promising pugilist than was Carnera when I first watched the Italian.

"He is much more intelligent than the majority of fighting novices. He is a better listener than talker, and whatever aptitude he possesses was born in him and not acquired. He has been taking lessons for two months only, but he already has a capital straight left, a rapid right cross to the jaw that is similar to the one Carpentier employed, while it is palpable that there is plenty of power in all his punches.

"He is beautifully built for boxing, his muscles being small and sleek, and there is no part of him that budges. Pettifer is very near to my conception of what a heavyweight newcomer should be.

"Those behind him are fortunately men who will not wreck him by forcing him to gallop when his gait should be a very steady walk. He is being taught in the most private gymnasium in the world, and one of the men behind him is George MacDonald, who was one of the discoverers of Tunney," the sports writer concluded.

OSBORN WINS 220-YD. TITLE

Clinton Osborne, New England diving champion of the Boston Swimming Association, annexed another title when he won the 220-yard senior backstroke race, defeating Cecil Schnare, defending champion, in the feature event of an authorized N. E. A. A. U. championship swimming meet held off Beach st., Wollaston Beach, yesterday. Osborne also successfully defended his diving title later in the day.

Novotny Leads In Western Amateur

Beverly Country Club, Chicago, July 21 (INS)—Gus Novotny of Edgewood Valley, runner-up to Frank Dolp of Portland, Ore., in the 1928 championship, took the early lead in the initial 18 holes of qualifying play of the amateur today.

Bass-Canzoneri in Title Go Tonight

New York, July 21 (AP)—Benny Bass of Philadelphia and Tony Canzoneri of New York occupy the place of honor in the national boxing schedule this week. They clash in a 10-round bout at Philadelphia, win of the season for the Agawams.

Agawam A. A. Beats Randolph All Stars

The Agawam A. A. trounced the Randolph All Stars, 11 to 2, for the city of Boston prize money on the Common yesterday. It was the 25th win of the season for the Agawams.

Fuller and Pisano in Battle at Tiverton

Sam Price, matchmaker for the Marks Stadium at Tiverton, R. I., clinched another lightweight battle for his club when he signed Augie Pisano, Hebrew boxer from New York, to battle Sammy Fuller of the North End in the 10 round feature bout there next Monday night.

Pisano has beaten Bruce Flowers twice, and has fought him a draw. He whipped Cowboy Eddie Anderson three times, and whaled Billy Wallace of Cleveland to defeat.

Roche Nine Beats Bayside in Ninth

J. A. Roche baseball team of Everett scored three runs in the ninth to defeat Bayside, 10 to 7, at Hull yesterday.

A homer by Garrity with two on in the seventh gave Bayside a 6-3 lead, but Searles did the same thing for Roche in the eighth to put the winners in the lead.

TILDEN HURT IN PRACTICE MATCH

ent. "People will think I am preparing an alibi."

Tilden, however, needed no alibi, insofar as this correspondent was concerned. He had seen Tilden fall, sprawling full length on the court a few moments previously, and had seen the court attendants rush anxiously to the player's side.

"I am really playing in the Davis Cup matches against my own better judgment," Tilden explained to International News Service. "But Joseph W. Wear, chairman of the cup committee, and Capt. Fitz Eugene Dixon of the American Davis Cup team had urged me to play, and the syndicate for which I am writing was willing to release me from my contract, beginning Wednesday. Therefore, because of my personal friendship for Wear and Dixon, I will do my best when I get out on the courts.

"But now this ankle has gone bad! I wonder whether I will be able to play at all. But I will play. I'll play if it kills me!"

Was Practicing With Kozeluh

Tilden was playing a practice round with Karel Kozeluh, the Czechoslovakian professional. The lanky American went down heavily. Other members of the team rushed to his assistance.

A physician at the scene immediately investigated the injury.

Tilden was barred from competition in the challenge round because of his determination to write a description of the tournament for the newspapers. The difficulty was solved by agreement of the Davis Cup Committee to Tilden's writing advance stories of the tournament today, tomorrow, Wednesday and Thursday, and to have his description next week, after the matches are concluded.

After examining the injury, the physician instructed Tilden to rest quietly for at least 48 hours, during which time he was to keep his weight off the injured member.

French Davis Cup Team Is Picked Tentatively

Paris, July 21 (INS)—The team which will defend France's possession of the Davis cup against the United States here this week was selected tentatively today.

Henri Cochet and Jean Borotra were named definitely, while Jacques Brugnon and Christian Boussus were tentative selections.

Fitz-Eugene Dixon, non-playing captain of the American team, requested until this evening to name his players, owing to Bill Tilden's accident. He is being taught to use Tilden, George Lott, John Van Ryn and Wilmer Allison, but Tilden's sprained ankle may enforce a change.

Youngsters to Bear Brunt in U. S.-British Polo Tilts

New York, July 21 (AP)—America's polo hopes in the forthcoming international series with Great Britain will be pinned almost exclusively on this country's younger mallet stars.

Tommy Hitchcock, captain of the American international forces, announced yesterday that the squad from which his team will be selected has been reduced to 13, with the withdrawal of such veterans as Watson Webb, Devereux Milburn, J. Cheever Cowdin and Malcolm Stevenson.

Another of the original players invited to participate in the trial matches, Cecil Smith of Austin, Texas, will not be considered for the team since he cannot come east until September 1.

The international squad now will consist of Hitchcock, the Californians, Elmer J. Boeseke, Jr., and Eric Pedley; Earl A. S. Hopping, Stephen Sanford, Harold E. Talbott, Stephen O. Iglehart, Winston Guest, W. Averell Harriman, H. W. (Rube) Williams, Bobby Strawbridge, J. C. Rathborne and G. H. (Pete) Bostwick.

It was made clear by A. C. Schwartz, spokesman for the polo defense committee, that all positions on the "Big Four" were open and that the lineup that will defend the Westchester Cup against Great Britain probably would not be announced until the night before the first match, September 6.

Joie Ray-Salo Team in 500-Mile Relay Race Lead

Granby, Que., July 21 (AP)—Runners in the international relay race splashed away this morning in a heavy rain on the second lap of their 500-mile grind, which started at Montreal yesterday. Their allotment for today is the 55-mile stretch to Sherbrooke.

L. Thoraval, Montreal, whose partner, J. H. Chouinard of Temiskaming, dropped out yesterday and forced him to run the full 55 miles from Montreal, which he made in ten hours, started today with Dick Lesage, Montreal, whose partner, Tom Gigg, dropped out yesterday with sore feet.

Joie Ray, Chicago, and John Salo, Passaic, N. J., winner of the second Fyle Bunion Derby, led the big field into Granby from Montreal, covering the distance in 5 hours and 23 minutes.

Dempsey Fought Under Own Rules in Firpo Bout

NO COUNT WHEN TIGER WAS KNOCKED FROM RING; AIDED BACK BY SPECTATORS

By JACK CONWAY

Luis Angel Firpo got his first lesson in American boxing methods when he battled Jack Dempsey at the Polo Grounds, New York, on September 14, 1923. He found out that more than a crushing right hand punch is necessary if one is to win the heavyweight championship of the world.

Firpo was surrounded by inexperienced advisers. He had fired Jimmy DeForrest, who was the only member of his camp who knew the difference between a left hook and a right hand uppercut.

Jack Conway

Tex, Rickard, of course, was in the background as the generalissimo of the Firpo forces. On account of his position of promoter, Tex had to act carefully. He also feared getting in wrong with Dempsey.

Despite his interest in Firpo, Rickard had tremendous admiration for Dempsey. Dempsey had been his. Whenever the Rickard bankroll was weak, the promoter could always call on Jack, and the latter would pack the cash customers in.

Rickard did not possess the same kindly feelings for Jack Kearns, Dempsey's manager. He resented the fact that Kearns had taken the Dempsey-Gibbons bout to Shelby, Montana. Tex looked upon Kearns as a potential rival. He knew Kearns was thoroughly versed in the boxing game, and feared that he might even attempt to promote a title bout himself.

Rickard's belief that Kearns was anxious to promote a Dempsey bout was unfounded.

I met Kearns a few days before the Dempsey-Firpo bout at Luther's Hotel at White Sulphur Springs, New York. Later we rode down to New York together.

"I will never let Dempsey fight for any other promoter other than Rickard from now on," Kearns told me. "I got all I wanted out in Shelby. I was lucky to get what money I did, while I was obliged to work my way out of a million jams.

"When one fights for Rickard, he is sure of collecting his money. The same is not true when some of these new promoters are running the show. They leave you carrying the bag."

One of the reasons for Kearns visiting New York at this time was to make sure Dempsey got fair treatment from the officials. Kearns always believed it didn't hurt his cause to do a little hoofering before a match.

$1,000,000 GATE

The night of the bout finally arrived and found the Polo Grounds jammed to capacity. The gate topped $1,000,000.

I understand that Dempsey got 45 per cent of the gate, which would have made his end of the purse $450,000. It was the largest purse a boxer ever received up to that time.

When the gong sounded, Dempsey made good his promise that he would fight Firpo. He came out of his corner like a roaring lion. Dempsey, as was always his custom in the early rounds of his fights, directed his attack to the body.

There was more furious fighting jammed into that first session than in any contest staged during the past 25 years.

Firpo dropped under the power of Dempsey's punches. He went down for a second time, but came off the floor fighting. In all Firpo went down five times during that wild first frame.

Johnny Gallagher was the referee. At no time did the referee order Dempsey to return to a neutral corner after knocking Firpo down. After one of the knockdowns Dempsey stepped over Firpo's prostrate body and stood over him waiting for him to get up.

Jack kept his arms by his side and so was able to hit Firpo with a crushing punch as soon as he got off his knees.

Few persons back from the ringside section noticed the first time Dempsey went down. He was driving to close quarters at the time when Firpo clipped him on the chin with a short right hand punch.

Dempsey told me later that the punch nearly knocked him out. He went to one knee, but got up instinctively. Most of the fans thought Jack had merely slipped.

I occupied a seat in one of the first rows of the press section. Late in the round Dempsey backed over close to where I was seated. He was about four feet to my right.

THROUGH THE ROPES

The old Tiger let go his thunder. Five times Firpo had come up off the floor. Dempsey was probably beginning to wonder what this giant Argentinian was made of.

Undaunted by the terrific punishment he had been subjected to, Firpo crowded forward. Suddenly Firpo let drive with a right hand swing. It was one of those "dying" punches. Everything Firpo had was behind the blow.

Dempsey tried to pull back into the ropes, but he couldn't get away from the punch. It crashed to his chin and the champion went bolting through the ropes into the press section. He landed on a typewriter three seats to my right.

The referee failed to start any count when Dempsey left the ring. Under the rules of boxing, he should have done so. If the referee had counted, Dempsey might have been stripped of his title before willing hands in the press row pushed him back into the ring.

Dempsey also could have been disqualified for being assisted back into the ring. The referee, however, failed to act. Dempsey fought under his own rules that night.

Firpo didn't retire to a neutral corner when Dempsey went flying out of the ring. Instead he stood near the edge of the ring, his right hand "cocked" waiting for his prey.

I talked with Jack after the bout and he told me he was out on his feet when he got back into the ring.

Firpo could have won the title right there despite all the breaks Dempsey had been getting if he had not lacked experience.

Dempsey was wide open to be hit with a left hook as his right was at his side.

Firpo, however, had little use for a left hand. He had always made his big play with his right.

The "Wild Bull of the Pampas" let go another right for the chin. The reeling Dempsey saw the punch coming and fell in under it. Jack held and wrestled for a short period. The gong sounded and Dempsey's title was saved.

Jack Kearns was so excited that he broke a bottle of smelling salts while attempting to get into the ring. He then seized a sponge, soaked up some of the smelling salts and put the sponge under Dempsey's nose.

Physical condition then won the bout for Dempsey. He revived during the minute's rest, while Firpo was as tired at the opening of the second round as he was when the first session ended.

The "Wild Bull" was shot down with a left hook to the body. He was glassy eyed when he regained his feet.

Dempsey knew he had his man and he measured him. He shifted his attack to the head. He nailed Firpo with a terrific left hook to the jaw. As the South American started to fall, Dempsey crashed a right to the chin.

Dempsey turned and retired to his own corner. He knew it was over. He calmly waited as Firpo was counted out.

But if Jack had been obliged to retire to a neutral corner, following the knockdowns of Firpo in the first round, was counted over when out of the ring, and had not been helped back into action the title might have gone to South America.

Jack Conway will have another article on "The Inside of the Boxing Racket" in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.

Jack Conway Picks Babe Hunt to Win Over Pantaleo

Jack Conway today picked Babe Hunt to win from Paul Pantaleo in their ten-round bout at Braves Field tonight.

"I have never seen Hunt in action under fire," said Conway, "but I did receive an opportunity to size him up during a gym workout at Miami, Fla., last winter. He is a big, powerful fellow and impressed me as being a good puncher. He recently defeated Al Friedman."

Conway's 1930 record follows:

SPECIAL EIGHT ROUND
Semifinal, 160-Pound Class
John Patrick Sullivan, Ireland, vs. Oddone Piazza, Italy.

MAIN EVENT
Babe Hunt, Oklahoma, vs. Paul Pantaleo, Chicago.

Paul Pantaleo, undefeated Italian heavyweight from Chicago, may be battered down to the first defeat of his professional career tonight at Braves Field, when he clashes with Babe Hunt, the puncher from Ponca City, Okla., in the 10-round future bout of Alex MacLean's show.

The bout will feature a total of 42 rounds of boxing, all between big fellows.

Despite the fact that Pantaleo has won 29 of his 31 bouts by the knockout route, and has fought draws with Ernie Schaaf and King Lavinsky in his other two professional bouts, he will go on the short end of the betting when he crawls through the ropes to meet the tall, loose-limbed young giant from the heart of the oil country.

Hunt has lost only one decision in more 60 bouts. He fought Young Stribling in Tulsa, Okla., a no-decision contest with Hunt winning the popular decision. He knocked out Knute Hansen, once touted as a coming champion. He whipped Al Friedman twice, and whaled giants like Big Bill Hartwell and Carl Carter to defeat.

BETWEEN INNINGS

By JOE CASHMAN

If the Pirates get anywhere in the National League race this season, Pittsburgh fans can thank Bob Quinn, for it is the Red Sox prexy who is responsible for one of the most important cogs in the Smoky City outfit being in the lineup today.

We refer to Adam Comorosky who, almost single handed, beat the Braves four times in a row last week by his terrific hitting and spectacular fielding.

To see the Pirates' left-fielder belt that old apple as consistently, hard and far as Rogers Hornsby could in his prime and gallop around the garden in all directions as well as Tris Speaker could a decade ago, nobody would ever imagine that he was on his way out of the big show not so long ago.

Yet, he was and would be back in the minors now but for Quinn.

Comorosky One of Best Fielders in the Game

When the Pirates let "Kiki" Cuyler go to the Cubs, Comorosky was picked to fill the vacant outfield berth. He did not do so well at first and Cliff Brickel finally beat him out for the job.

Then, the Bucs decided to use Comorosky in a trade for some minor league talent and asked waivers on him.

Quinn, having seen the youngster play, felt that he was a most brilliant prospect, and refused to waive.

Unable to send him to the bushes, the Pirates decided to keep him rather than let the Sox acquire him, and eventually started using him again.

He clicked from the start this time and now rates as one of the greatest outfielders and hitters in the business.

He sure would look sweet in the Sox outfield, and that he isn't a member of the Fenway flock can be set down as one of the toughest of the many tough breaks Bob Quinn has had since coming to the Hub.

Maranville Doesn't Have to Be Driven

We learn something new every day.

A well known New York scribe, in an article praising Bill McKechnie for the fine job he has done with the Braves this season and explaining the reasons for his success, says, among other things:

'And he talked Rabbit Maranville into playing the greatest ball of his career."

McKechnie must have been sending Walter telegrams from Rochester and St. Louis to make him the best shortstop in the circuit last year.

The Tribal pilot has done a great job and Maranville's remarkable playing has been largely responsible for it, but the Rabbit, an outstanding player long before McKechnie ever became a manager, never had to have anyone talk him into playing good ball.

He may not have always kept in shape to do his best, but it never took any urging by a manager to make him give his all on the field, and he has been a model of good behavior since coming back to the Hub.

It's most unfair to hint that McKechnie ever had to drive the marvelous midget.

George Bullwinkle Collapses in Meet

Stockholm, July 21 (INS)—American athletes, participating in the International track and field meet here, had but one victory to their credit today.

Steve Anderson, University of Washington star, won the 120-yard high hurdles in 0:14.7.

The New York middle distance speed man, George Bullwinkle, collapsed ten yards from the finish line of the 800-metre run.

NEW TENNIS CHAMP LIKE EX-STAR

Kansas City, July 21 (AP)—The counterpart of William "Little Bill" Johnston of California today holds the national clay courts tennis singles championship.

As Bryant Grant, Jr., 19-year-old Atlanta boy, battled in 100 degree temperature yesterday at the Rockhill Tennis Club, to subdue Wilbur F. "Junior" Coen of Kansas City in the finals of the 21st renewal of the important event, tennis followers let their thoughts wander back several years and saw the slight Californian playing with that courageous determination, never-say-die attitude, which characterizes the play of the new clay champion.

Neither Johnston nor Grant was blessed with the tennis physique of a Tilden or a Frank Shields, notwithstanding the fact Grant's father, B. M. Grant, is a 6-footer and in 1907 with Nat Horton was runner-up in the national doubles. But both were endowed with fighting hearts and with those they conquered physical deficiencies.

A few inches over five feet in height and weighing 120 pounds, Grant is more sturdy than was Johnston when he "made 117 pounds" for tournament competition. He tires, but does not collapse.

In the finals of the Southern at Memphis a week ago, Grant won the fourth consecutive title with the temperature at 106, breaking all heat records. But while the gallery suffers and has pity for the tiny Georgian, he pounds ice water on his neck and fights on.

Until he was in his teens the new champion played little tennis. He preferred baseball and not until his father urged him to take up the game at which he had won honors did the son forsake the bat and ball. But once at the game, he quickly moved among the topnotchers.

Morin and Felt Win Titles

EACH TAKE PAIR OF N. E. EVENTS

George Morin of Holy Cross and Boston Athletic Association, and Donalt Felt of Melrose, were the star performers in the annual track and field championships of the New England Association A. A. U., held at Pfaffman's Oval, Quincy, yesterday.

Morin won both the dashes, and Felt captured both the hurdle events.

Harold Osborn, noted high jumper, gave an exhibition of his specialty and cleared the bar at six feet six inches.

The feature race of the day was the 440-yard run, won by Donald Felt of the B. A. A. from a field of 25.

Felt nosed out his teammate, Dana Smith, who finished second, and Frank Shea of Lynn, who won the event last year, was only a step behind Smith.

In the 100-yard dash Morin proved too fast for the rest of the field. He won his heat and the final without being pushed to the limit. Francis Ramsbotham of New Bedford finished in second place and Kenton Farrell of Brockton third.

Morin also won the 220 without exerting himself. Frank Shea, who finished second, was five yards behind, with M. Kline of the Y. M. C. A. a few feet behind Shea.

In both the hurdle events Felt came home in front by beating out A. J. McDonnell, B. A. A., in the high and W. C. Rose of the B. A. A. in the low timber topping event.

Elno Heikkila of Norwood ran a fine race in the mile in which there were 15 starters, with Paul Kanaly, last year's champion, third. Heikkila and Kanaly came down the home stretch almost neck and neck. Heikkila won by a yard.

THRILLING FINISH IN N. E. MILE

Paul Kanaly

ONE OF THE BEST races in the New England A. A. A. U. title track and field meet at Quincy yesterday was the 1-mile run. Paul Kanaly, Belmont, last year's champion, and Elno Heikkila, Norwood, battled almost neck and neck all the way. Heikkila, with a final burst of speed, broke away from Kanaly to win by a yard. The time was 4m., 30 secs.

Lynn Cornets Win From Somerville

The undefeated Lynn Cornets handed the Somerville Cubs their first defeat in a month, 11 to 4, at Batry park, in Lynn, yesterday. The Cubs petered out after having five tallies left on bases in the first two innings.

The Cornets represented the pick of the Lynn Federal league teams. Manager Tom Whelan hit a long home run while Bill Schultz of the Cubs had a triple and two singles. Jimmie Galvin batted for Pagliuco in the eighth and made a three bagger.

Bunker Hill Celtics Beaten by Maccabees

Dorchester Maccabees, Bay State soccer league outfit, won its first trophy by defeating Bunker Hill Celtics, 4 to 3, in an exhibition match yesterday at Caledonian grove, West Roxbury. The Maccabees took the lead and then lost it but they staged a last period rush to snare the trophy donated by the Boston Soccer Social Club.

Pierce Concord Winner

Concord, July 21—Frank A. Pierce, with a net of 29, won the best selected nine holes of 18 tournament, at one-half handicap, staged over the week-end at the Concord Country Club links.

Boston Port in Review

By CARL MORRISON

Many shipping men feel that Governor Allen should give his personal attention to affairs at Commonwealth Pier. The State gradually is encroaching upon space there which in the opinion of many people, rightfully belongs to shipping usage.

The Department of Public Works, under the Fuller administration, advised against taking space on the pier for state departments which could not be housed in the regular rooms in the State House. The Governor at that time decided that these departments must be given space on the pier, even though their activities have no connection with shipping.

Governor Allen will be asked soon to study the situation, to see if these "outsiders" cannot be relocated back in the State House. Under present circumstances, which cannot be held as the fault of Supt. Norton nor entirely that of the Public Works Department, additional costs are being inflicted upon shippers.

For instance, cargoes that used to be "headed" up because of plenty of available storage space, now must be piled high to conserve space. This obliges shippers to put on more men to handle the unloading, etc., with resultant expenses.

All this cargo jam makes itself felt on the passenger ship situation, sometimes causing annoyances to passengers embarking.

Shippers are confident the state will take care of its own difficulties at the pier, especially since there is a movement developing to ask the Legislature to turn this dock over to the city for operation.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
Golf's Greatest Teacher

While I always wanted to see the club started away in the back swing in the positive control of the hands, a blending of a left arm start in some fashion, either as a shove-off or a push from the left side, has the advantage that it should cause your arm to start downward and first from the top, which is highly desirable. This relieves the forward swing will operate as a reverse of the back swing, so we see that any device which starts the clubhead first from the bottom should, reversely, start it first from the top. We hear of left-arm pulls in the forward swing, and some advocate especially at the take-off, may work well, but you must avoid using too much of it. Any practice of pulling the club all the way down will not work out to as good a swing as you might otherwise have. Be content to start the club forward first—then let it accelerate in its own way.

By long odds the most satisfying shot in golf is the drive, and many hold it to be the most useful shot. Chester Horton's new monograph almost guarantees you a good drive. It is so simple and easy to grasp. This fine instruction will be sent free. Address Chester Horton, care this newspaper, and enclose a stamped self-addressed envelope. Ask for the monograph, "Driving."

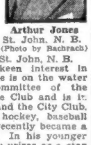
TODAY'S WHO'S WHO

The subject of today's harbor sketch is Arthur Jones, manager of the export department of Furness-Withy Co.



Arthur Jones

Jones has been with his concern for 15 years, and is recognized as a well informed man on exports. He saw service in South Africa during the Boer War and during the World War was the British Ministry representative in Boston, as his firm was the agent for the British government on shipping matters. (Photo by Bachrach) He is a native of Boston.

"Al" takes a keen interest in harbor affairs. He is on the water transportation committee of the Foreign Commerce Club and is in the Traffic Club, and the City Club. His hobbies are hockey, baseball and fishing. He recently became a bridge enthusiast. In his younger days he won many prizes as a star bicycle racer.

UP FOR HIS TICKET

Capt. Charles Barnes of Saugus, who is about 60 years old, is applying for a "ticket" as master of sailing vessels. This is despite his having spent half a century on sailing vessels. The reason is that he has been sailing fore and aft ships, but that type has been replaced by the square riggers, so that Capt. Barnes must get a new kind of license. Incidentally, Capt. Barnes built his own ships in the early days and wherever he sailed, he hired his ship as being from "the port of Saugus." His were the only ships ever listed as being from that community, an inland city.

RADIOPINIONS

CHIC SALE and his antics with a baby last night were very amusing. Chic was trying to quiet the crying infant who sounded like the shrill toot of a police whistle. Anxious we were to offer the opinion that if a stray diaper pin be removed the child might be soothed, but before we could carry out our inspiration Mother appeared and said the child was teething.

Music is the best expression of the life and times of an era, and last night over WEEI and a nation-wide Kent program gave an excellent cross section of what people were doing and how they were acting from 1910 to 1920. Though in those days there wasn't the effervescent gaiety of 1930, there seemed to be a certain buoyancy, an irrepressive "I don't care spirit" and a tuneful tang, especially noticeable by "Poor Butterfly" and "Beautiful Lady." There isn't anything particularly modern about that decade but the music seems to be the embryo for what has followed.

To hear a woman make violent love to an unresponsive man is a rare and incomprehensive thing, but on the "Globe Trotter" program from WNAC last night it was done realistically and it probably soothed unrequited males who attended. The "Globe Trotter" was in Hawaii last night and our yearning for that country was increased by the picturesque method of describing that country over the air. The air and atmosphere in hailing the sweet Pacific ozone and constantly waxing rhapsodic from the native music, which seemed to be played on every street corner.

After three hours of unjazzy music from 7 to 10, it is a relief on Sundays to get the popular tunes played by Gene Arnold's Jean Goldkette and his Studebaker Champions are doing the interpreting over WNAC. And even Mr. Goldkette is influenced by the holy day, for he doesn't thrust torrid melodies upon us but is content to play the slower rhythms. It is peculiar how we look forward to jazz on Sundays, whereas during the week it is the unyielding plague which occupies 99.44 per cent of the time.

CONCERNING RADIO

Edited by BILL WHIPPLE

Big Gun to Speak

PATRICK J. HURLEY, Secretary of War, will be heard over WEEI tonight at 8:30.

How many times in the past, in that era when the hair on our face had not reached such a luxurious growth as to necessitate more than once over twice a week with the razor, and we knew that we had come to man's estate because we were making our own living, working for a weekly salary, we were admonished by the boss because he thought we watched the clock too much. It seemed to be his firm and unchangeable opinion that "clock-watchers" would never amount to anything.

That seems to be the general opinion among employers, that those who keep a too close surveillance on the hands of a clock aren't worth their keep; they're bound to come to a bad end.

However, there is one business today wherein watching the clock by employes is of the utmost importance. That is the radio business. Time, and absolutely correct time, in the studios is one of the greatest factors to contend with in broadcasting. The eyes of announcers must continuously shift to the clock's dial, or possibly his watch, and woe betide him who neglects this duty.

Broadcasts are timed not in minutes, but in fractions of minutes. If a broadcast is timed to be off the air at 9 o'clock, that does not mean one minute, or even a half-minute past 9; it means just exactly on the dot. And so close must the following program succeed the previous broadcast that there can be not a fraction of a minute's separation between the two.

In the smaller stations there may possibly be some laxness in this regulation, but in the big stations and in the chain stations it is an iron-clad rule to "keep an eye on the clock" and under no circumstances let a broadcast run over its alloted period.

We all know that old, unwritten law of the stage, "The show must go on"; life, death, sickness or sadness, must not and cannot interfere with the show on the show. And so, too, has the law of the studio become as iron-clad, only it works the other way round, i.e., "The show must go off." No matter how perfect the broadcast or how important the individual may be, he is at the moment, when the time is up off they go.

In fact, so important is this part of broadcasting that the National Broadcasting Company have a newly organized society among announcers, called the Clock Watchers Association. It is designed to promote the accurate timing of radio features, and the society will admit to its rolls any announcer or production men who, for a whole week, keeps his programs from running more than ten seconds over their allotted space in the schedule.

When you, Mr. and Mrs. Radio Fan, are comfortably sitting before your loud speaker, the program to which you have been listening comes to an end and without hesitation, fuss or noticeable break a new program comes in, just visualize that way up in a studio a very nervous man, watching the clock every few moments is giving a big sigh of relief, and is then taking a few full breaths of air. He watches the clock and gets paid for it.

DO YOU KNOW THAT

HEYWOOD BROUN ceases his radio columning August 1 when he goes on his vacation, but he will return August 25 . . . Frank Black, director of the Radio Guild under Bakers, has a pet hobby of collecting valuable bronzes. Recently he picked up a bronze statuette for $80 for which the engraver alone was paid $400 many years ago . . . Gladys Rice and Ruth Jones were featured in an entertainment last Wednesday given to Walter Kiesewetter, concert pianist, among those present were Edwin Franko Goldman and Jolly Bill Steinke . . . Austria is going big for American jazz . . . An NBC page boy was searching frantically for a pair of scissors the other day. After a 3rd degree he broke down and said James Wallington, announcer, had taken him on special quest in order that he, Wallington, might trim his moustache . . . The page boy was sent to a drug store to purchase a pair of shears . . . Bill Daly who is in the public eye at the moment was a prodigy virtuoso at the age of thirteen and was graduated from H ~ard at 19 years . . . Nicholas Vasilieff, director of the Russian Cathedral Choir heard Sundays, is an excellent tenor. His father, brother, two uncles and three brothers earn their livelihood by tenoring . . . The father of Hildegarde Gaines, as does Inc. Doscher, is Christian Gauss, dean of the College of Princeton. She is a Freudian fan and says Mother Forest soothes his patients' nerves by putting on the radio while he does his reading. Woe unto the pallest who hears the "Funeral March" while the Dr. is about to yank . . . Freddie Rich, Columbia conductor, quit the amusements of N. Y.'s lower East Side, such as fights, gang wars and dock diving at the age of 14 to become a 2nd ave. motion picture house pianist. He played nine variations of "Hearts and Flowers" and got 13 per for it.

Wrote Her Fiancé the Inside Story of What Happened in Paris

Only two persons—Woodrow Wilson's wife and their social secretary—knew what Wilson endured in Paris as he fought Clemenceau, Orlando and Lloyd George, with the world's fate at stake.

Each night the secretary, Edith Benham, wrote her fiancé, Admiral Helm, telling what the President that day had confided about the actors in that drama behind guarded doors. Intrigue . . . spies . . . secret treaties . . . the things that broke his heart.

JACK HOLT, RALPH GRAVES AND DOROTHY SEBASTIAN IN KEITH FILM

The Cast

Mack	Jack Holt
Griff	Ralph Graves
Marie	Dorothy Sebastian
Sergt. Klein	Richard Cramer
Dupont	Lionel Belmore
Bert	Harry Allen
Colonel	Carl Stockdale

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

OF ALL THE melodrama to which the sound screen has given birth, "Hell's Island," feature at the New B. F. Keith's this week, is about the most mellow. It is "meller" to the point of utter mediocrity on the score of merit; and yet for the lovers of this type of photoplay it will probably have a very generous appeal. There are box office angles, such as the sexy nature of some of the situations, and the language. Those who, for Cupid's sake, love their happy endings, will find romance the conqueror at the wind-up, after a long, long trail of trials and tribulations.

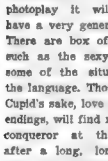
WE ARE SUPPOSED to accept Messrs. Holt and Graves as pals in the French Foreign Legion, engaged in the Saharaish task of settling the hash of a lot of Riff Rebels. The film enters upon its career with a good deal of atmosphere; there is excellent photography of the military unit on the march in the sands. They arrive at the town of Bel Abbas. Here lives a cabaret entertainer, Dorothy Sebastian; until the poet's beauty, she is not born to blush unseen and waste her sweetness on this desert air. She has long been Jack's "sweetie." His fellow soldiers yearn for her. She proves the undoing of Alphie's heart; this brings him clashing with his buddy. Ralph goes in deep, proposes, and is accepted.



Dorothy Sebastian

COMES THE BATTLE. Jack is shot in the back. He thinks Ralph did it. Ralph doesn't. He is promoted sergeant, and then strikes him. Then he heroically lifts his friend and bears him off to the first-aid station. Ralph is ordered to serve ten years on Hell's Island, wherever that be. To fly to his side, Miss Sebastian persuades Jack to become a prison guard on her pledge to marry him. She makes good. On the island, Jack arranges for Ralph's escape, but at the same time is going to shoot him down. Then Jack learns that his own wound came from a Riff bullet; so lets his friend escape with Mrs. Jack in the classiest of classy motorboats. Mistaken for the fugitive, Jack is himself laid low with a bullet.

ONE OF THE WORST features of the picture is that it brings too many memories of other pictures. It has in its making suggestions from "Condemned," "Beau Geste," "What Price Glory," "The Cock-Eyed World," "The Bad One," "Devil's Island"—perhaps you may be able to suggest others. It is practically lacking entirely in good acting; its dialogue is weak, and its humor is not all it should be. Yet out of the material given him, Director Edward Sloman has managed to build a photoplay that entertains despite its drawbacks. Several of the sequences are very, very good.

THE REST OF THE KEITH bill is all wood and a yard wide. There are extremely comic shorts, filled with hearty laughs; and a film that is easily the best, whiling picture we have ever seen. This is the one titled "The Bottom of the World." It is sterling, so fine indeed that we are going to say more about it later on. It is an Antarctic feature worth everybody's seeing.

Norumbega Park Attracting Crowds

Norumbega Park continues on its amusement way with many additional summertime features and further enthusiasm for those attractions which opened the season. The miniature golf course is literally being swamped with fans. The Tolaim Dining Room continues with Jimmy Joy and his orchestra.

Esplanade Concert

The program for tonight's Esplanade concert follows:

Overture, "The Flying Dutchman," Wagner
Second Movement, Allegretto, Fifth Symphony No. 7 ..... Beethoven
Fantasie, "La Boheme" ..... Puccini
Suite, "Nutcracker" ..... Tchaikovsky
(a) Miniature Overture
(b) Chinese Dance

Lends a Helping Hand

ELLIOTT NUGENT AND MARY DORAN

MARY OFFERS to help Ralph Elliott, who is leaving home to make a new start in life. From "Sins of the Children," a Cosmopolitan production for M-G-M, coming soon to Loew's State

DANCING STAR KEITH-ALBEE HEADLINER

Betty Compson on screen and an excellent RKO bill on stage make the Keith-Albee program this week doubly appealing. Buster West, a splendid dancer besides being a juvenile comedian of more than ordinary ability, with John West, is the headliner. The famous dancing team is returning to vaudeville after several seasons of George White's "Scandals," are assisted by Georgia Moore, and they continue to be seen as the "Two Sailors," a couple of jolly tars stepping the deck.

Tom and Ray Romaine in a hilarious farce with gay songs and dances which they call "Noisy Neighbors," is another number. With the Romaines are Estelle Cawthorn, Winifred Dean and Jack Hall. Other acts include the skillful Swiss athletes, the Agemos; Evans brothers and Maidie Du Freane, known as the "dancers from Clowniand," and Louis London in character songs.

The photoplay "Inside the Lines," featuring Betty Compson, is a story of espionage at Gibraltar during the World War. The sweethearts, as German spies, meet unexpectedly in the heart of the British fortifications at Gibraltar. They are charged with the task of blowing up the British fleet.

Miss Compson is supported by a cast of English stage and screen stars including Ralph Forbes, Betty Carter, Ivan Simpson, Montague Love, Reginald Sharland, Evan Thomas and Mischa Auer.

ALICE WHITE ON MODERN SCREEN

Alice White is the star of the film playing at the Modern. It is called "Sweet Mama," and is another tale of gangs and guns. In this one Alice's boy friend loses his job at the bank and becomes mixed up with a mob of high class crooks who make a cabaret their rendezvous.

Befriended by an understanding cop, Alice, a tank-town show girl, secures work as an entertainer in the night club. A fact which provides her with opportunities to sing and dance with her usual abandon. But her main mission in life is to tip off the bluecoats about the big trick, which the under-worldlings plan to turn. This she does, and after the smoke clears away, the little girl gets a big hand and a couple of strong arms around her.

Miss White makes a satisfactory heroine for this not too fresh nor original book. She plays a poor part well, handling both cabaret and emotional scenes in good fashion. David Manners is the boy, while Kenneth Thompson and Lee Moran are the menacin' men of the production. Mr. Thompson, in particular, does good work.

STRONG BILL AT PARK

A double feature program holds the screen at the Park. The top picture is "Worldly Goods." The cast is headed by Merna Kennedy, James Kirkwood and Shannon Day. With power acquired by ruthless business methods, "Caesar" Tullock amassed millions. Tullock, the war-profiteer of almost limitless wealth, is the incarnation of all that is mercilessly self-seeking, while the delicate child, Melita, is his antithesis. The lives of these two mingle in contrast, but Tullock learns his lesson and Melita finally finds happiness.

The other feature is "The Second Honeymoon," Josephine Dunn, Edward Earle and Ernest Hilliard are featured in this very clever drama of a wife who goes in search of romance.

FOX PICTURE SCHEDULE OMITS JANET GAYNOR

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Universal Service Motion Picture Editor

Copyright, 1930, by Universal Service, Inc.

LOS ANGELES, July 21—Janet Gaynor, who put her small foot down and announced empatically in print that she would make no more pictures for Fox unless they gave her better stories, is due for a surprise. Up to now the Fox company has made no reply to Miss Gaynor's statement. Yesterday in conversation with Winfield Sheehan I put the question squarely up to him and asked him if Miss Gaynor was returning to the Fox company.

Mr. Sheehan said: "We have 18 pictures scheduled, not one of them mentions Miss Gaynor." Winnie is a diplomat, as you can see by that reply, which would have done Lord Chesterfield credit. It means that the Fox Company will make no further effort to persuade Miss Gaynor to come back to them. I am really concerned over what will happen to her, because she is a nice child. The other film companies will not sign her because of the gentleman's agreement they have not to trespass on the other film companies' territory while a contract is still in existence. The Fox Company still holds a contract with Miss Gaynor.

THE YOUNGER BENNETT sister, Joan, is now at the Fox studio. That was somewhat of a surprise, for we have been hearing for the last three months that "Smiling Thru" was to go into production at United Artists with Joan in the role that Norma Talmadge created in the silent picture. Then nothing happened, and yesterday came word that Joan is playing the feminine lead opposite Edmund Lowe in "Scotland Yard." The three Bennetts were an interesting trio everywhere they went until Barbara, the dark haired one, left with her husband, Morton Downey, to go to Europe. Barbara sent a telegram that she is sailing immediately, and I have no doubt she will make a great success as a dancer at the Kit Kat Club. Constance is at the Pathe studios.

EDDIE CANTOR STICKS with the movies. He also sticks with Florenz Ziegfeld. By an arrangement with Samuel Goldwyn, Eddie will have himself in the matter of comedy, color, grouping and ensembles, is the reason for his new contract with the Goldwin organization.

HERE IS A CHANCE for the younger generation. Warner Brothers are starting a stock company with Marilyn Morgan, Edward Morgan and Barbara Weeks with a view to stardom for any one of the three who makes a success. In young Morgan they believe they have a potential Buddy Rogers, and if he clicks at the box office, puff said. Since Warner Brothers have taken over First National most of the stars who were then under contract have left. Among them are Corinne Griffith, Colleen Moore, Dorothy Mackaill, Alice White, Billie Dove and Jack Mulhall. Richard Barthelmess is the only one of the old guard left, but Richard has played in unusual luck. He has had four straight successes, and right now he is more of a favorite than he was five years ago.

THE NAME OF Adam Hull Shirk brings back memories of "Ingagi." Wasn't it Shirk who had a hand in producing this picture which so stirred the wrath of all the conservatives in the picture business. Anyway, he is the author of a play called "The Ape" which he wrote some years ago and which is about to be put into pictures by the Liberty Productions Company with Jean Hersholt and Harry Langdon in the lead. This naturally has no connections with "Ingagi" else you wouldn't find Hersholt or Langdon playing a part.

ONE GOOD PICTURE leads to another. No, that is not original, other columnists have written it. George Chandler did such a fine piece of work in "The Florodora Girl," Marion Davies' picture, that Larry Darmour went out and signed him for the comedy lead opposite Louise Fazenda in "Pure and Simple." Is George thrilled to play in a picture with Louise Fazenda? I'll tell the world. Please pardon me for being slangy but Louise does manage year in and year out to have more comedy successes of her type than any actress I know.

SNAPSHOTS OF HOLLYWOOD collected at random: William Haines playing all the games at Ocean Park and being followed by admiring fans. Billy bringing home the bacon. Lita Grey Chaplin being constantly cruised on her marriage to Roy D'Arcy, Clara Kimball Young, some pounds lighter than she was a few months ago, lunching in the Spanish Patio at the Ambassador. Laura Hope Crewes building a beautiful new home in Beverly Hills. Katherine Dale Owen in a pale blue dress becoming to her blonde hair, at the Hollywood bowl. Mary Duncan back in town being much entertained by her friends. Ilona Sande, Emelian actress, recovering from a tonsil operation. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

FRIEDA MIERSE

Shuberts to Present "Let's Get Married"

There was a general celebration at Lakewood and Skowhegan when Frances Goodrich and Albert Hackett were notified that Messrs. Shubert had accepted for production, early in the fall their comedy, "Let's Get Married," which was recently tried out at Southampton.

Miss Goodrich is one of the most popular players Lakewood has known, in its 30 years of existence, and therefore the reason for celebrating her success in placing this play. "Western Union, Please," another comedy by Miss Goodrich and Mr. Hackett, will have its first performances at Lakewood during August.

Garden Girl

"Why is my pet begonia shedding its leaves?" demanded Mother Mine of the Garden Girl over the hedge this morning and cupped an ear for the garden secrets' reply.

Whenever a begonia loses its leaves or bulbs it means too much or too little sun too much or too little water and not enough fresh air. Put your plant on the porch for the rest of the summer if it's place not too sunny.

A begonia will do better in the shade than in too much sunshine. The roots must be kept moist at all times. If it continues to drop its leaves after being outdoors for a while cut it back to the roots and let it send forth new growth."

Make Your Sandwiches or Canapes Delicious

THIS HOT CHEESE SPREAD is luscious on sandwiches or canapes. Just try it sometime and you will be surprised.

KITCHEN QUESTIONNAIRE

HOW CAN I MAKE MILK KEEP LONGER FROM SOURING?

Add a pinch of Worcester Salt to the fresh milk. This delays souring and also makes the milk more digestible

The Salty Salt For Kitchen and Table

Flows Freely

BE SURE to clip out today's illustrated recipe for Italian canapes, sent in by Mrs H. S. Church of Grafton, Vt., for even although canapes may appear but seldom on your table, you will want to use the delicious cheese mixture as a cracker spread, and on sandwiches, as well as for a delicious appetizer.

They win this week's $5 prize. More and more "plain everyday housekeepers" are adding canapes to their menus because they find that they are even easier than cocktails or soups and perhaps a little newer. Canapes are either hot or cold and are usually a zippy mixture of some kind spread on either toasted finger lengths of bread or crackers.

This particular cheese mixture is excellent spread on a slice cut lengthwise of a loaf of bread rolled up like a jelly roll, cut off in slices at the end and toasted for a moment. Mix up just one batch of these canapes and you will agree with me that the flavor is quite the most delicious you've discovered in many a day.

ITALIAN CANAPES

Mix 1 c. of chopped Pabst-ett with 1 beaten egg, 2-3 c. of cream, 2 tbsp. of lemon juice, ¼ tsp. salt, a dash of Lea & Perrins Worcester-hire and a speck of Bird's pepper. Spread on Sunshine Krispy Crackers or finger length pieces of bread toasted on one side. Place in a moderately hot oven (375 deg F.) for six minutes. Serve hot garnished with parsley.

Dainty Bridge Luncheons For the Summer

From Martha Lee's Monday Morning Broadcast Over WHDH by the Boston Evening American.

Martha Lee

WHETHER YOU are an inspired devotee of bridge or one who has to be enticed into a game or driven by main force to the tables, the subject of colorful and dainty bridge luncheons will have an equal lure. I have friends who would deal out the bits of pasteboards and bid no trumps if the house was burning about their ears. I verily believe, and to such lovers of the game torrid weather is no hindrance. However, to make the day more interesting, both for natural and forced players, this luncheon carried out in cool yellow and green is just the thing. Here's the menu.

MENU

Pineapple Nut Salad
Bridge Sandwiches
Special Coffee
Assorted Cakes

PINEAPPLE NUT SALAD:
1 cup boiling water
1 pkg. lemon gelatine
3 carrots grated (¾ cup)
½ cup pecans
1 cup crushed pineapple
½ tsp. salt
1 tbsp. lemon juice

Dissolve gelatine in boiling water. Cool, add other ingredients and mold. Serve on bed of watercress mask with cream cheese, dec rate as desired.

GOLDEN CAKE
½ cup butter
1 cup sugar
Yolks 5 eggs
1 egg
1¾ cups flour
2¾ tsp. baking powder
¾ tsp. salt
¾ cup milk

Cream butter, add sugar gradually, while beating constantly. Add egg yolks and egg well beaten. Mix and sift dry ingredients and add alternately with milk to first mixture. Turn into greased and floured individual cake pans and bake at 375 deg F. for about 15 minutes.

DATE BREAD FOR SANDWICHES
1¼ c. dates, cut up
1 c. chopped walnuts
1¼ c. sugar
1 tbsp. butter
1 egg
1½ c. boiling water
1 tsp. salt
1 tsp soda
2¾ c. bread flour

Pour boiling water over dates and add butter and sugar. Set to cool. Then add soda, sifted with flour, walnuts and 1 tsp. vanilla. Pour into greased and floured bread tins. Bake at 350 deg. F. for 1¼ hours.

SPECIAL COFFEE:
3 c. cold strong coffee
4 c. cocoa made with milk
4 tbsp. cream
6 tbsp. powdered sugar
1 tsp. vanilla

Combine ingredients in order given. Stir well and serve in glasses containing crushed ice. A topping of whipped cream may be served if desired.

Faithfully yours,

Martha Lee

How to Make Iced Tea

1. Scald out a crockery tea-pot and while it is warm put in a teaspoonful of SALADA TEA for every glass required.
2. Pour on fresh boiling water (be sure it is "bubbling" boiling), allow it to steep for five minutes.
3. Pour the infusion into an open bowl or glass pitcher and thoroughly chill by standing on ice or in refrigerator.
4. When serving add lemon and sugar to taste.

Shopping with Priscilla Price

Dearest Anne

Vacations are coming in leaps and bounds! I love to shop at this time of the year when the tang of the sea creeps into the shops and color and beauty abounds. Flowers from everywhere are caught into the silk fabrics, with lawny stretches of singing sand and long shadows of emerald green. Prices are tumbling into our arms and beautiful clothes are marked deliciously low. Markdowns — Reductions—Sales! A stitch in time saves nine. A trip in town saves nine times nine.

Vacation Clearance!

Florence Daniels is leaving for her vacation. So she is selling out all her charming summer frocks at $8.75 regardless of original prices! She says, everything must be gone and has slashed prices accordingly. Florence Daniels, you know, has built up a reputation for distinctive, one of a kind models. In this sale frocks formerly marked $35 you can now buy for $8.75. Many of these dresses are actually marked below cost. Filmy chiffons—crisp and cool for sultry evenings, adorable silk crepes for outdoor wear, charming ensembles. There are a few suits in silk or covert cloth that are so smart! Misses' sizes. If you're looking for values shop at Florence Daniels, 41 Winter St., Room 75.

Summer Pastels

Misty blues — jade greens — sparkling whites! The elusive rose and gold of parchment— These are the colors of the imported Morocco calf leather hand bags at Curcuru & Co., 120 Boylston St. You'll need several of these enchanting bags to blend with your frocks and complete your ensembles of summertime pastels. Because they are made in Morocco by the same firm that sells them to you here retailers get them at wholesale prices—$1.50, $2, $2.50 and $4—less than half of their value. There are several styles and designs. It's really worth-while to drop in. Watch for the lantern trademark, for it's your guarantee of the finest genuine, hand-stitched Moroccan leather! Curcuru & Co., 120 Boylston St. They also have a store at 150 Bellevue Ave., Newport, R. I.

28,000 Women

Can't be wrong!—for that's the number of frocks the Crystal Dress Shops sold in June. Isn't that proof enough of their value? They have dresses at $2.95 that were made to sell at $8.50 to $10.50! — Dresses that are all silk (no rayons)—and thousands to choose from! It's their million dollar buying power for their 30 stores and the thousands of dresses they manufacture that enables them to sell less than wholesale. This week there's a special offering—Beautiful sample dresses made by their manufacturers to sell from $16.50 to $22.50 marked as low as $5.95. If you can duplicate any of these dresses elsewhere—at the same price—you may keep the dress free. Crystal's, 610 Washington St., next to Keith-Albee Theatre.

Personal Daintiness

can be easily maintained. For when your precious summer frocks become soiled The New England Dyers & Cleansers, Inc., will not only expertly clean and press them but they will restore them to their original freshness. The charge but $1.25 for cleansing plain silk dresses, and only $2.25 for dyeing—in all the smart summer shades. The men-folks will be interested to know that they cleanse and press three-piece suits for 75c. White flannel trousers are cleansed and made to look like new for the same price, 75c. Free collection and delivery service. Special attention is paid to Parcel Post orders. All garments are insured while in our possession. New England Dyers & Cleansers, Inc., 109 Gardner St., West Roxbury. Tel. Parkway 6100.

What a Temptation

to draw from your bank balance when you're planning that big event—your vacation! But if you do your shopping at the new Apparel Salon of Scott Furriers, New England's Largest Fur Establishment, 69 Summer Street, you can buy a vacation wardrobe that will be complete, dainty and smart, at prices that will meet your budget and leave plenty for your trip. Dresses slightly soiled and those worn in Scott Furriers' Style Show start at $2—then there are others at $5 and $9. Who Heaved That Ho!

It's only Sonny playing "down to the seashore"—out in his treasured sand pen from Filene's. Your garden will be gay this summer if you get Peggy one of these trig little things. They're painted in every hue imaginable! And priced at only $10 complete with awning. Surprisingly inexpensive when you consider the joy the kiddies get from them. No longer will you have to worry about Peggy's whereabouts—for you'll be sure to find her contentedly playing in her pen. You'll find them on the third floor of their Gift Shop Building where there is a gorgeous array of vari-colored wooden sand pails, sailboats, sand derricks; quaint little ducks carrying sand pails on their backs, and all things that delight a child's heart. There's one feature of these wooden toys I know you'll be interested in. Vegetable paint is the only sort used—so there's no danger of baby getting a tummy-ache even if he insists on tasting his new toys. Dear little folding beach chairs at only 89c each and the duckiest sand moulds —not just ordinary ones—but moulds to create figures and animals of all kinds. These are priced from 35c to $2.50 a box. For the mechanical or air-minded boy there are boats, submarines and the most fascinating model airplanes. Filene's Toy Department, third floor Gift Shop, corner of Hawley and Franklin Sts.

Smithy Peels Potatoes in France

CHAPTER 34

The months pass—each day a replica of the last, time on and time off, work and rest and recreation. I have had no leave at my own request. It was early autumn when I came out and now spring is here—nearly seven months since I started peeling potatoes and onions at the trestle table outside the camp kitchen along side Misery, Cheery, and Blimey.

We are known as The Four Whys, our nicknames all ending in the same letter—for, of course, I am again Smithy, the inevitable faith of all Smiths in the army since ever there was an army.

I have become accustomed to being a machine, to living by the clock, to having my amusements and my religion set before me in carefully-measured doses, to sleeping certain hours, to working certain hours, to exercising certain hours, to taking aperients on certain days whether they are necessary or not, and to donning the cheery, indomitable personality of a member of the Women's Army each morning with my uniform, and discarding it only when the bugle signals "Lights Out."

I am a slot machine that never goes out of order. Put so much rations into the slot and I will work so long, play so long, and sleep so long. The administration is perfect. Everything is regulated.

Slot Machine
Never Out of Order

Even my emotions. I am serious at given moments such as church parade; I laugh at given moments, when there is a visiting commission or at any entertainment where the program calls me this. Item is comic in order that I may not register incorrectly. I am not unduly happy, neither am I needlessly unhappy—I would not dare be either.

If I were over-happy I should be sent for—as Cheery is often sent for—and be kindly chided for lack of dignity and control. If I were noticeably unhappy the Unit Administrator would tactfully put me through the third degree and, if unable to trace the cause of my state of mind, would make a determined effort to restore me to a standardized state of mental elation. Amusing books would be selected for me.

I should be invited to tea and talks—a pleasant form of confession with a chocolate biscuit accompaniment that is highly popular — or I should attend special concerts and be roped in for a course of vigorous Morris dancing—as Misery is. But I am neither over-happy nor noticeably unhappy. I am the most equable disposition in the unit. The Administrator says so. My companions like me because I am "always the same."

No Passes
Smithy Is Content

There is no hanky-panky about me. I am told, you can neither shock nor surprise, please nor displease me. I never complain. I have no grievances, and I never argue. The Unit Administrator is fond of upholding me as an example.

I never request a pass. There has never been one black mark against my conduct or my work. I have never even broken a rule. I do not tell her I am not interested enough in the rules to break them—for she would not believe it.

She is determinedly kind and tactful and takes a personal interest in every member of her unit, whom individually she knows by name. She calls herself our "Mother Confessor." I have heard her privately described as "Nosey Parker," but not often, for my comrades revel in pouring confidences into her willing ear.

Besides, they like the chocolate biscuits that go with the maternal advice. She tells our mothers, with whom she is fond of corresponding, that the minds of her girls are as open books to her. Naturally the Rabelaisian pages are reserved for the dormitories.

I live in a Nissen hut with a number of companions. Once this communal life would have stifled me, but now I am quite content that the details of my body, my

HEART ATTACK FATAL TO GEO. T. CUDDIHY

Loved by Thousands, Cuddihy Is Said to Have Saved 500 From Drowning

George T. Cuddihy, "miracle man" of the L st. baths, who saved 500 persons from drowning and put scores of others on the road to health, died at 5 o'clock this morning in City Hospital, after a heart attack suffered yesterday.

The flag on the famous bathhouse was lowered to half staff in his honor, and gloom pervaded the place.

Cuddihy, who was 63 and lived at 251 L st. and had served at the baths 25 years, was known and loved by thousands. For 35 years prior to his work at the municipal baths, he devoted much time to volunteer lifeguard work on the South Boston waterfront.

WAS HEALTH BUILDER.

For years he had charge of the boys' division of the bathhouse where he taught them to be strong swimmers and life-saving experts. He was a master at first aid.

Many men in excellent health today ascribe it to Cuddihy's massage system, with which he made a specialty of taking those upon whom doctors had turned thumbs down.

He was a nemesis to neuritis, umbago and inflammatory rheumatism and aided many a boy crippled since infancy. Those who knew of his accomplishments said that had he wished he could have had riches because of his skill.

SAVED "DEAD" MAN.

He had the reputation of not having failed in any attempt at rescue, but in many cases those he saved were revived only after hours of labor in restoring respiration artificially.

One of his greatest achievements was early in his career when a man was fished from the water at City Point and pronounced dead by a doctor.

Cuddihy arrived as the "body" was about to be taken to the morgue, pushed the crowd aside, worked over the man for nearly four hours and brought him back to life.

URGE ALLEN BAR ONE-MAN CARS

Former Representative Thomas A. Niland of East Boston today asked Governor Allen to direct the Elevated trustees to remove the "dangerous" one-man trolleys in East Boston under pain of dismissal.

"It was published recently that you had summoned the trustees before you to direct them to improve the service," Niland stated in his communication.

"I have been urged to write requesting you to order immediately from East Boston the one-man type of cars as they have been proved to be a menace to the lives, limbs and health of our inhabitants, as well as a great delay in the service.

"I further request that if the trustees do not promptly remove these dangerous cars that you will remove them from their positions."

PROBE CRASH AT DENNISON AIR MEET

Inspectors Investigate Cause of Accident in Which Fliers Escape

By GEORGE HAMBLIN

State and federal aircraft inspectors today began a probe into the cause of the accident in which Albert J. Anderson, pilot, and his passenger, Thomas White of Winthrop, escaped injury in an airplane crash at the Dennison airmeet yesterday.

State Inspector of Aviation Robert L. O'Brien and federal inspector Robert Hoyt are investigating details of the crack-up which was witnessed by Inspector Ralph Torpey of the state aviation inspection service.

Anderson, the pilot, completely recovered from shock suffered in the crash and his passenger, Thomas White, thinks nothing of the accident in which both escaped death.

Anderson, with White in the front seat, had just released a balloon at 700 feet altitude and had cocked the plane in a steep vertical bank in order to go down wind, turn back, and break the balloon with his propeller

MOTOR FALLS OUT

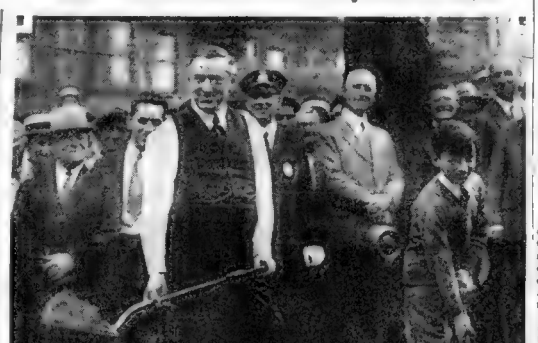
Snapping the plane in the tight vertical bank, Anderson found himself in a tail spin and at dangerously low altitude. He swung the controls and succeeded in straightening out. Not having sufficient height to recover from the dive Anderson succeeded in flattening the ship out so that he hit the ground in a "three point landing" position.

The undercarriage folded up, and the motor fell out, saving both fliers lives. Without the motor, the ship flopped over on its back and was demolished. Anderson and White were treated by Dr. G. Lynde Gately, owner of the plane. White had a slight cut on the head, and Anderson suffered a cut on the upper lip and shock from having the wind knocked out of him.

BRINTON, RACE WINNER

Anderson was taken to Quincy Hospital and then home. White returned to the airport with Dr. Gately and was taken up in the Waco biplane of Roscoe Brinton, of Springfield, who upset the dope and won the free-for-all Boston Light race.

Following closely on the heels of the speedy Waco was Walter Gress, of Dennison Airport, in a Travel Air biplane, powered with a 165-horsepower Wright Whirlwind engine. Guy "Gus" Ham of Wellston, in a 100-horsepower Kinner-engined Davis, captured third place.



MAYOR CURLEY — GEORGE CURLEY

To Mayor Curley and his son, George, fell the honor of turning the first shovelfuls of earth at Governor sq. today to start the actual work on the 3,100,000 subway extension. Here they are digging in as a group of traction expert and railroad officials look on. (Staff photo.)

Turning the First Shovelful

SHOVEL FIRST EARTH FOR EXTENDING SUBWAY

Thousands of Spectators at the Ceremony of Beginning Work for 500 Persons

Actual work on the $3,100,000 extension of the subway from Governor sq. was begun today after Mayor Curley, in the presence of 2000 spectators, turned over the first shovelful of earth and his son, George, nine, turned the second.

The ceremonies marking the start of the project that will relieve traffic congestion in Governor sq and require two years to complete were followed by start of work by 50 laborers.

Mayor Curley spoke briefly on the progress of Boston's rapid transit system since he first held office in 1914. Among officials present were members of the Boston Transit Commission and of the Brookline Board of Investment.

Also present were Ernest Springer, chief engineer on the job; E. E. Whitney of the Boston Elevated Park Commissioner William P. Long and Traffic Commissioner Joseph A. Conry

Upward of 500 men will be employed on the project, which, when completed, will see the subway extended under Governor sq. to the railroad bridge on Beacon st. and a point opposite the Beth Israel Synagogue on Commonwealth ave

Chin Louis Insists on His Nap in Sedan

Chin Louis, 35-year-old Chinaman, holds the doubtful distinction of being the first Oriental ever arraigned on a vagrancy charge in the Suffolk county courts. All because he slept once too often in James Delaney's sedan.

Delaney is a night watchman in a Boston office building. And a forgiving men. But Chin placed too much strain on that quality and Delaney had to call in the police.

The thing started about 10 days ago when Delaney got into his sedan to drive home. And there was Chin curled up in the back seat.

Delaney questioned him, but Chin couldn't savvy and Delaney, in the kindness of his heart, thought he was just one of the poor unemployed.

But the next morning and the next and several mornings thereafter, when he found Chin snoring away, his patience became exhausted

Yesterday morning Delaney put his foot down

"There'll be no more of this, my lad," said he to Chin. "This machine is no Oriental yacht I'll have you know. And if I see you here in the morning I'll have to turn you in."

"No savvy," said Chin. And he shuffled off.

Patrolman Frank Donovan met Delaney on the street this morning and was escorted to the sedan parked in federal court

"There he is again officer," said Delaney, "and I'm tired of warning him decently."

In municipal court Judge Dowd asked Chin where he lived

"New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore, Boston," Chin replied.

"Well, now," said the court, "I'll give you till next Monday to decide which one, and in the meantime I'll have the doctors examine you at the Psychopathic Hospital."

REUNITE AFTER WIFE IS SHOT

On what may prove her deathbed, Mrs. Laura Nestor, 33, of Lawton ave., Lynn, became reconciled today with her husband Mark Nestor, Lynn business man, following the murder of her mother by a rejected suitor who then wounded Mrs. Nestor and killed himself.

The shooting took place yesterday in Moncton, N. B., at the home of Mrs. Nestor's mother, Mrs. Etta Fitzsimmons, 60, of Stedman st

Mrs Nestor was shot twice through the head by Newton Wilbur 37, of Queen st., Moncton after she tried vainly to save her mother from Wilbur's rage

He shot down the elderly woman when she upbraided him for continuing his advances to Mrs. Nestor after her marriage; advances that caused the estrangement with her husband.

Nestor, on being informed of the tragedy in Lynn, rushed to Moncton and became reconciled with his wife as she was about to undergo another operation in an effort to save her life

Father of 7 Robbed of $120, All He Had

On his way to City Point for an outing with his wife and seven children, Charles Russ, of 16 Marion st., Wide Park, yesterday lost or was robbed of $120. It was all the money the family had, for Russ, except for couple of days at intervals, has been out of work for months.

On Saturday he cashed insurance policies he had been keeping up for his children for years and had the proceeds with him in a purse when he started for the beach. After leaving an Elevated train at Dudley st. to change to a trolley car he noticed the money was gone.

Smash 7 Doors to Seize Drugs

Smashing through seven doors to gain entrance to what police claim to be the most opium den in Boston's Chinatown, Sergt. Robert Caverly and members of the headquarters drug squad late yesterday seized 10,000 grains of opium, 15 opium pipes, 15 pipe hooks, and arrested nine Chinese.

For the past two weeks, police have been watching the house which is in the basement at 29 Tyler st.

Dr. Thomas Flynn, of Everett, Dead

Dr. Thomas F. Flynn of 559 Broadway, Everett, died at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, last night, following an operation for appendicitis.

He is survived by his wife, the former Miss Helen Hanlon, to whom he had been married only a few months. He has been practicing medicine in Everett for about five years. Funeral arrangements will be announced later.

Motorcycle Cop Injured in Crash

M'LAUGHLIN WARNS OF FIRE PERILS AT BOSTON'S AIRPORT

WOULD GUARD $2,780,000 PROPERTY

Urges That City Apparatus Be Placed There; Army, National Guard Hangars "Obsolete"

The condition of United States Army and Massachusetts National Guard buildings at Boston Airport is sharply criticized by Fire Commissioner Edward F. McLaughlin, in a special report to Mayor Curley today, in which the commissioner says that otherwise conditions are generally satisfactory.

Commissioner McLaughlin recommends the installation of one unit of fire apparatus at the airport, because the nearest station, at present is three-quarters of a mile away, and prompt action might save lives and valuable property in the case of plane crashes, he says.

BUILDINGS OBSOLETE

Both army buildings and both national guard structures are obsolete and should be removed or reroofed, the fire commissioner says, adding:

"If U. S. Building No. 2 is to be used as a garage, as it is at present, then rules and regulations governing garages should be enforced."

With the future enlargement of the airport, it would be wise to extend Porter st. to the flying field to permit greater ease of access, and changes in the water supply system are to be desired both for the present and future, he declares.

Conditions in privately owned hangars are found to be generally satisfactory although certain minor changes, and in some instances sprinkler systems are recommended.

VALUED AT $2,780,000

An investigation of conditions, upon which the report is based, was made by Commissioner McLaughlin, Chief Fox and other officials at the suggestion of George L. Pickett, superintendent of fire alarm.

In making his recommendations the commissioner takes into consideration the high value of property at the airport, which he sets at $2,780,000, of which $1,860,000 is for airplanes and the rest for buildings and equipment.

'PEEP' SUSPECT HELD IN $1000

Joseph P. Comstock, 20, a Boston art student, alleged by police to be the "peeper" who terrorized women in Weymouth for several weeks, was arraigned in Quincy today and was held in $1000 for the grand jury.

Comstock was arrested by Sergt. George Hunt and Patrolman Anthony Panora after he was alleged to have thrown a note in the bedroom of two women at a Lochmere ave. home.

The note requested the women to keep an appointment with the writer. Sergt. Hunt and Patrolman Panora detailed their services to act as decoys at the trysting place and arrested Comstock.

"Polly" Mason's Son Born at Hollywood

Polly" Mason, former Malden girl, who danced her way to fame on the stage, and her husband, Skeets" Gallagher, screen player, are receiving congratulations at Hollywood today on the arrival of a son yesterday.

The birth of the child makes Mrs. Muldoon of 132 Commercial st., Malden, a great grandmother, and Otto W. Mason of the same address a proud grandfather. Pauline Mason was famous as a juvenile dancer here before she grew up, took to the stage and was glorified by Ziegfeld.

Five Injured in Salem Collision

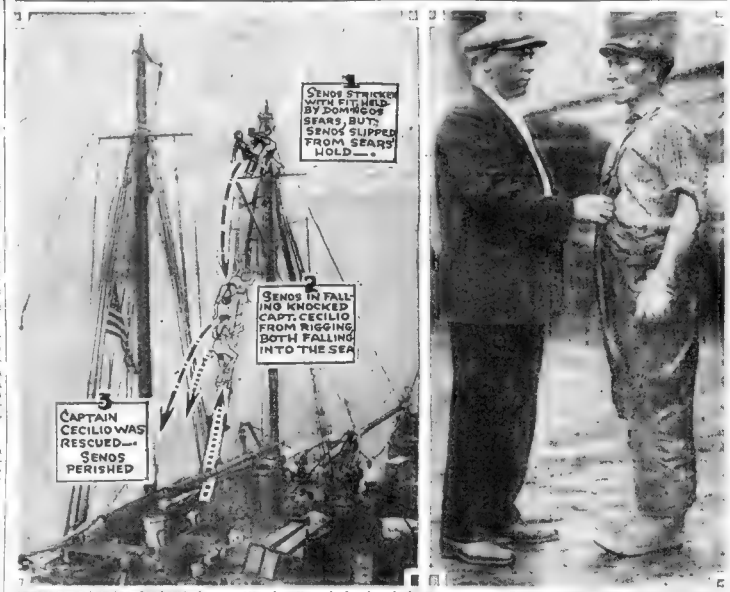
Five persons were injured early today when an automobile operated by Miss Vera L. Griffin of Eastern ave., Lynn, crashed into a machine which was parked in Bridge st., at Webb st., Salem.

The women who were injured were Miss Vera L. Griffin of Eastern ave., Lynn; her sister, Miss Grace Griffin, and the Misses Dorothy and Margaret Landry. The machine that was parked in Bridge st. was owned by Arnold W. Burns, of Parker River, Newbury.

Foot Mangled in Boat Engine Gears

John Kane, 35, of 1242 Columbia rd., South Boston, suffering from a mangled left foot and the loss of a toe, after his foot had been jammed in the gears of his engine in his motor boat, off Deer Island, yesterday, was removed by motor boat from the island to Shirley Gut and treated at the East Boston Relief Hospital.

How Death Rode the Wave as Father Saved His Son



1 SENOS STRICKEN WITH FIT, HELD BY DOMINGOS SEARS, BUT SENOS SLIPPED FROM SEARS' HOLD—
2 SENOS IN FALL-ING KNOCKED CAPT. CECILIO FROM RIGGING, BOTH FALLING INTO THE SEA
3 CAPTAIN CECILIO WAS RESCUED— SENOS PERISHED

CAPT. JOSEPH CECILIO COSTA CECILIO FATHER AND SON as they arrived in Boston today with news of the tragedy. Senos was stricken by an epileptic fit and a companion's efforts to save him were in vain.

PLUNGES INTO SEA IN FIT

With one of his crew drowned and Capt. Joseph Cecilio, 31, suffering from injuries sustained when he was struck by the falling mast, the swordfishing schooner Gov Al Smit harrived at the Fish Pier today.

The schooner reported the death of Joseph Senos, 30, of Gloucester, Saturday, when the craft was off Georges Bank. According to Dominzos Sears, also of Gloucester, Senos was seized by an epileptic fit in the lookout post. As he fell Sears seized him and shouted for help.

Capt. Cecilio started up the mast on a rope ladder, but when part way up Sears' hold weakened and Senos hurtled down, striking Capt. Cecilio on the head and knocking him overboard.

Senos struck the rail on the way down. Then his body was sucked into the wash of the schooner's screw. Capt. Cecilio managed to keep afloat until a dory reached him.

Senos, according to his mates, was married only four months ago.

Hub Cools Off While Rest of Country Is Baking

Boston felt relief from the heat wave today while the rest of the country still baked under a blazing sun and record temperatures.

With the thermometer a few degrees below yesterday, due in part to an overcast sky in the early forenoon, the weather bureau predicted possible thunderstorms late today.

One person was overcome by today's heat, however. Miss Mary Douglass, 33, employe at the Parker House and living there, collapsed in Chapman pl., in the rear of the hotel, and was taken to Haymarket Relief Hospital.

Another drowning was added to the hot weather toll. State police and officers of Lake Walden reservation, using grappling irons, found the body of Malcolm Meiconian, 38, of Central st., Lowell, in 15 feet of water where he went swimming with two companions.

A shift of the southest wind into the northwest is expected tonight or tomorrow, bringing even greater relief, according to the weather man.

Official forecast for Boston and vicinity: Partly cloudy tonight and Tuesday; possibly with thunder showers late this afternoon or tonight; not quite so warm Tuesday, moderate to fresh southwest shifting to northwest winds.

Pay Last Tribute to Veteran Sergeant

Funeral services for Sergt. Michael J. Hartnett, for 30 consecutive with Roxbury Crossing police station, were held today from St. Gregory's church, Dorchester. A detail of 19 police officers led the funeral cortege from the Hartnett home to the church, where solemn high requiem mass was celebrated by the Rev. John J. Considine.

Burglar Loots One Lynn Home of $100

The home of Mrs. James Higgins, 538 West End ave., Lynn, was entered early today while the family were sleeping, and jewelry valued at $100 was taken. Shortly before this a man entered the home of Mrs. Joseph Richards, 50 Nahant st., but was frightened away by the screams of Mrs. Richards. Entry in each house was gained by cutting a screen.

BIG RESPONSE IN WORD HUNT

One hundred and twenty-four of Uncle Sam's mail bags, crammed to overflowing with thousands upon thousands of answers to the first Ripley Word Hunt evidence the popularity of this unique game of matching wits with Ripley, and the widespread circulation of the Boston American and Boston Sunday Advertiser.

Each package is carefully checked and the preaminary process alone will require a large corps of workers.

The majority of those who sent in entries were well ahead of the deadline time limit, a fact which aided in getting a better start on the checking and judging.

Even so, the task of determining the winner of the $1000 first prize and the 98 other cash awards, will require some time, and Word Hunters in the first contest are asked to be patient. Every possible effort will be made to arrive at decisions as early as possible.

Act on Veto

The Waltham City Council this evening will take action on Mayor Dunne's veto of an order establishing the office of assistant city clerk and providing for the official's election by the city council.

GANG PROVIDES FOOD FOR TREE SQUATTER

Pomerleau Eats Despite Mother's "Foodless" Threat to Bring Him Down

Heartened by a sumptuous breakfast, Rosaire Pomerleau, 14-year-old tree sitter, began his third day on the apple tree in the backyard of his home in Spencer ave., Chelsea, today.

The meal was provided by the Spencer ave. gang, who rallied to Rosaire's support after Austin Tierney, his sitting companion for 36 hours, made a forced landing. Austin was going strong in the endurance test until his mother beckoned for withdrawal.

While breakfasting on his perch, Rosaire was informed that Austin had been taken severely to task by his parents—so severely in fact that he did not show under the tree today.

Housewives in the vicinity of Spencer ave. viewed Rosaire's sitting with alarm as milk deposited on back doorsteps at dawn by the milkmen continued to vanish.

The problem of procuring food for the sitter became serious when Rosaire's mother adopted a plan of starving him out of the tree, but a solution was offered by Jimmie Smith, 12-year-old manager of the enterprise.

Jimmie erected a gate in the backyard and charged one cent admission. Sunday was a bad day for the gate, but at noon today 61 cents had been taken in. Which will be enough to get a few more loaves of bread and a pound or two of boloney.

Hold Two Youths for Attempted Slaying

In Dedham district court today Judge Clifford B. Sanborn held Joseph Tecsaro, 19 Bean st., Norwood, and Frank A. Gemelli, 54 Hillside ave., Norwood, in $5000 bail for attempted murder. The two youths are alleged to have held up Frank Carson, Winslow ave., Norwood, and to have stabbed him four times July 18.

Room for One More Now

THESE TWO CHELSEA BOYS started out to accomplish big things by remaining perched in a tree for a week, but the soft spot of the tree on the right is vacant today and Rosaire Pomerleau, 14, is carrying on alone. Austin Tierney was forced down by his mother, last night, after being in the tree since Saturday morning.

"Billy" Hand, Hatter, Mourned by Many

Funeral services for William R. Hand, for half a century known to Bostonians as "Billy Hand, the Hatter," will be held tomorrow morning from St. Aidan's Church, Brookline, with many friends and relatives in attendance.

He died from a heart attack Saturday at his home, 104 St. Paul st., Brookline, at the age of 71. He entered the hat business as a boy and continued in it at the same Lagrange st. address until his retirement 10 years ago.

Fireman Injured by Falling Glass

A fireman was injured by falling glass and damage to the extent of $2000 was done to three wooden buildings in the rear of 112 Walter st., Roslindale by a fire of undetermined origin today.

Lieut. David Curran, 51, of Brown st., Roslindale, was cut on the forehead and taken to Forest Hills hospital.

The domestic help problem is solved by taking a kitchenette apartment and the best are advertised daily in the For Rent columns.

She thought:
"I'd gladly go to the movies with you—if you weren't so careless about 'B.O.'"
Yet, to be polite,
She said:
"Thanks, but the hot sun gave me a headache. I'm going to bed early."

Another lonesome vacation

...was 'B.O.' to blame?

(Body Odor)

PEOPLE had been friendly enough at first—invited him to go on picnics, walks and rides. But not any more! Even his own invitations were politely turned down now. That's what always happened—every year. He couldn't understand it.

Then, returning to the city on a crowded train, he overheard something. His own name and then—"B.O." And all at once—he knew! Realized why others left him out of things, kept away from him. For "B.O." is the polite term for a condition people dislike even to mention—body odor... Now he has adopted a simple safeguard against this fault that kept him unpopular. Next year won't see another vacation ruined by "B.O."

"B. O." weather—beware!

Hot sultry days like these make us perspire more freely—increase the danger of "B.O." We quickly become used to this ever-present odor, seldom notice it in ourselves—only in others.

Because it is so easy to offend and not know it, take this simple precaution. Wash and bathe with Lifebuoy. Then you're safe. For Lifebuoy, even in hardest water, gives an abundance of rich, creamy, antiseptic lather that penetrates pores—removes all odor—leaves you gloriously clean and fresh. Its pleasant, extra-clean scent—that vanishes as you rinse—tells you Lifebuoy purifies.

Keeps complexions at their loveliest

What a friend Lifebuoy is to the complexion! Millions of women know this. Its bland, searching lather deep-cleanses pores—gently frees them of clogged impurities. Then watch dull skins freshen—healthy, radiant beauty return. Adopt Lifebuoy today.

EDSON ANNOUNCES 3 DAY AIRPORT SHOW FOR TERCENTENARY

WILL START ON FRIDAY, AUGUST 15

Navy Dirigible Los Angeles and Many Army and Navy Planes to Take Part

Plans for the aerial display in connection with Boston's Tercentenary celebration on Aug. 15, 16 and 17, were made public today at a meeting in the office of Capt. Albert L. Edson, airport superintendent.

On Friday, August 15, Army and Navy planes will fly in formation. In front of each hangar at the Airport a plane will be exhibited by each company. A prize will be offered for the best exhibit

INVITE LOS ANGELES

It is also planned to invite the U. S. Navy dirigible Los Angeles, with her mooring ship Patoka, together with a smaller blimp

Saturday will be National Guard day at the airport, and Sunday General Commercial day.

On each day there will be parachute jumping, stunting by different pilots, and others flying activities.

HEADED BY COPELAND

The committee consisted of Harry B. Copeland, manager of the Curtiss Wright Flying Service; Edward Brewer, manager Skyways, Inc.; Frederick L. Ames, president East Coast Aircraft Corporation; B. Anthony Poilett, general manager Colonial Air Transport, Inc.; Goodrick R. Murphy, traffic manager Colonial Air Transport; Capt. Christopher W. Ford, U. S. A., commanding the Army air unit, and Theodore G. Holcombe, manager of the aviation bureau of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, together with representatives of Boston newspapers.

Children Escape in Manhole Blast

More than a score of children playing near Porter and Harvard sts., East Boston, narrowly escaped serious injury today when an explosion in two manholes sent iron covers 20 feet into the air, broken pieces landing like shrapnel among the children

Fortunately none of the youngsters was injured.

Huge Tercentenary List at City Hall

A mammoth program of July Tercentenary events under City and State auspices was placed at the Main gate of City Hall School st., today.

The program is eight feet high centenary colors, blue and yellow, and 10 feet wide, in the official Ter. Its size attracted the attention of thousands of passersby. The program will be changed in August and again in September.

Democratic "Pow Wow"

JUST AS TRU'E as you are living, a nine-hole golf course in South Boston can be played on deposit of four buttons. Here we have a foursome on said course—located at 824 East Fifth st.

POLES HONOR RACZYNSKI

Boston citizens of Polish descent climaxed their Tercentenary celebration last night with a reception and dinner in honor of Dr. F. Raczynski, Polish consul at New York, in the Polish National Home, Washington st., Roxbury.

Dr. Raczynski was in Boston as the official representative of his government at the observances. During his stay he was the guest of the Associated Polish Charities of Greater Boston and Stanley Winiowski, chairman of the executive committee.

PLAY GOLF IN BACK YARD

Four buttons, size and shape not specified, is the fee two small South Boston boys charge patrons of their nine-hole home-made golf course, in the rear of 824 East Fifth st., David Sylvester, 14, is manager and chief architect of the miniature course.

With a chum, Gerard Cohen, 13 he has been busy for days on the project without arousing any particular interest, until a snappy nine-hole layout appeared right under the eyes of his parents. Now, they have become rabid golf fans, along with many others in the vicinity who never before held a golf stick The course, one well studded with traps, bunkers and water hazards, draws many people to try their skill at the ancient game, and without doubt all comers will find it difficult when it is compared to other courses of the same type.

The Sylvesters run a risk of being overwhelmed with a huge supply of buttons so popular has the course become.

Maybe they will go into the wholesale button business. Who knows?

Fears Son Kidnaped

HER SON MISSING for two weeks, Mrs. Gladys Patterson, of Danvers, has appealed to police for aid in locating him. The grief stricken mother, shown above with her missing son, fears that the boy was kidnaped.

CLAIMS HER SON WAS KIDNAPED

Claiming that he had been kidnaped from in front of her home two weeks ago Mrs. Gladys Patterson of North Putnam st., Danvers, asked police aid in a search for her 14-year-old son, William L. Patterson, Jr.

According to the mother, the boy was placed in a roadster by a man resembling the youngster. As the youth was getting into the machine he hailed a boy chum and said:

"Tell my mother that you saw me get into a machine driven by a man that looks like myself."

The father, a New York salesman, had control of the boy for 11 years up to July 1 of this year, when custody was transferred to the mother by court order

At her home today, Mrs. Patterson was confined to her bed, grief-stricken and exhausted after a private search for her son since his disappearance.

Driver Cut Over Eye as Auto Is Wrecked

Although his car rolled over three times after skidding in Chelsea st., Charlestown, today, Gordon Cook, of Saratoga st., East Boston, suffered only a slight cut over one eye. The accident occurred near Vine st. and Chelsea st. at the height of the morning rush hour. Traffic was tied up for 10 minutes. The car was wrecked.

SEEKS ARREST OF DAUGHTER IN ELOPEMENT

Brighton Mother Charges Girl, 17, Was Abducted by Widower, 35

Mrs. Grace Ryan of Corey st., Brighton, talked with the clerk of the Brighton court today in an attempt to cause the arrest of her daughter, Annette Paine, 17, and Philip F. Martus, 35, widower, with whom she eloped.

Mrs. Ryan charged her daughter with being a stubborn child, and Martus with abduction, but no complaint was granted, the matter being left open for another hearing

In the meantime Special Officer Hamlet said Atty. John L. Newman had showed him a certificate revealing that the couple were married

According to the officer, the certificate showed the marriage was performed in Wilkes, N. H., and he assumed the couple were in Brighton.

He said Newman told him he would produce Martus if a complaint against him is granted

Mrs. Ryan said she had forbidden her daughter to see Martus and had sent her to New Hampshire to get away from him. When the mother called relatives in New Hampshire where the girl was visiting, she learned her daughter had left two days previously.

2 SAVE ROXBURY GIRL FROM LAKE

Miss Irene O'Donnell, 19, of Marcella st., Roxbury, was rescued from drowning at Lake Quinsigamond, Worcester, yesterday, by Lawrence A. Kilroy, 28, of Cedar st., Roxbury, and Joseph W. Hurley, 34, of Northboro st., Worcester.

She was bathing in shallow water with Kilroy when she stepped into a hole. She grasped Kilroy and pulled him under. Kilroy brought her to the surface and Hurley tossed a life preserver and plunged in, fully clothed, to drag them ashore.

BRIDE TELLS OF SUICIDE LEAP

A bride of five months, Mrs. Helen Mitchell Grieve, 22, of Rutland sq., at Cambridge Relief Hospital today told what prompted her to leap in the Charles river near Harvard bridge last night, from where she was rescued by Charles Roth of 76 Cherry st., Cambridge.

"I went to Laconia, N. H., my old home, last January," she said, "and there met an old schoolmate, Richard Grieve. We fell in love and were married in February.

"We lived happily there until early last week, when he received a letter from his mother, whom he said he had not seen for 18 years. He went to Foxboro to visit his mother and did not return.

"I came to Boston Friday to look for him. He did not meet me but his stepfather did. My husband sent word he was through with me. Yesterday I called him on the telephone and he told me not to bother him.

"I was in terrible straits as I am going to have a baby. I wandered around aimlessly and half in a trance I went to the river and plunged in. I remember striking the bottom. I woke up in the hospital.

"I will never live with my husband again, but he will have to support me and my baby."

Gas Company Buys Plot in Malden

The Malden & Melrose Gas Light Co. has purchased from the Boston Rubber Shoe Co., a subsidiary of the United States Rubber Co., two tracts of land on Charles and Commercial sts., Malden, to provide for future expansion of the gas company. One tract contains 142,786 sq. ft. and the other 36,831 sq. ft. There are 10 houses on the property, some of which are to be torn down. The land is assessed at from 20 to 25 cents a foot. Both properties adjoin present holdings of the gas company.

Asks Police to Find Police With Little Bird of Big Price

Harry Marasco, proprietor of a barber shop in the Boston & Maine station in Lynn, today asked police to help find his canary, which he values at $150

Marasco told police he was accustomed to let the bird out of its cage to fly about the shop The bird suddenly disappeared, and on investigating, Marasco learned it had been caught by some boys.

He was told that it had been taken from the boys by a policeman, who is said to have walked off with it instead of returning it to the shop.

Chippendale Show Will Be Guarded

When the historic Wentworth-Gardner house in Portsmouth, N. H., is thrown open to the public for the Loan Exhibition of American Chippendale furniture July 23, the priceless heirlooms will be under constant guard of watchmen and firemen day and night.

The exhibit is under the auspices of the Metropolitan Museum of Fine Arts in New York

PROBE ARREST OF DOCTOR

Elliot H Goodwin, chairman of the Civil Service Commission, stated today he will begin an investigation of the case of Dr. Sumner C. Andrews, veteran examiner, arrested at Salem with his wife on charges of drunkenness and assault on an officer.

Mrs. Andrews arraigned in Salem today on charges of drunkenness and disturbing the peace, pleaded not guilty and her case was continued for a week. Dr. Andrews, because of injuries sustained in a scuffle with a policeman, did not appear in court

Chairman Goodwin was not familiar with Dr. Andrews case, pertaining to his arrest at Salem Wednesday following a battle with his wife on their sloop Bobolynk

According to the police, Dr. and Mrs. Andrews and the former's father, Lawrence E. Andrews, who was operating the boat, resisted attempts of Patrolman William H O'Neil to board the craft after he had been notified there was trouble aboard.

Dr. Andrews has been civil service examiner for years, and is well known by state officials

DEMOCRATS TO FACE LIVELY SESSION

See Worcester Meeting, Called by Leaders, as Threat at Direct Primary System

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

One of the liveliest sessions in years faces the Democratic gathering scheduled for a week from today in Worcester to discuss the most available candidates for the State ticket.

Friends of the direct primary system see in the action of the Democratic State Committee, which last Saturday authorized the conference, a threat to the system itself They are inclined to look upon the conference as an entering wedge to a return to the old convention method of hand-picking candidates.

Martin Lomasney, West End leader, one of the state committee members who attended the Saturday session, made it plain that he would not be bound by any conference-approved slate, nor his candidate for the U. S. Senate, former Dist. Atty. Thomas C. O'Brien of Suffolk County

So keenly are some of the other candidates for the senatorship and the governorship, also, are making use of the fact that they will not abide by the conference results

Any selection that the conference will make—sponsors of the meeting argue, will not tend to bar candidates but will simply mean that the party workers think that the candidates they get together on have the best chance to win out at the polls

The fact remains, however, that all factions agree that any approved slate will have a decided advantage before the electorate.

Ask $20,000 for Cost of Garrett Search

The sum of $20,000 to defray the expenses of the search for Oliver B. Garrett, defaulted former police liquor raider, was among the items in a supplementary budget of $796,593 presented to the City Council by Mayor Curley today

The item was contained in an appropriation of $48,362 for county expenses. An appropriation of $39,- had been sought, but the mayor felt $20,000 was sufficient for the Garrett hunt and cut the amou to that sum

Dexter Asks Alphonse of Change in His Wife's Actions and Looks

CHAPTER 48

Dexter looked at Raquel without seeing her.

His chin hung loosely. His sullen eyes had gazed upon an apparition that, for the moment, shut out the reality of all other pictures

"You came over on the ship with Edith—with Mrs. Dexter?" he demanded rather than asked Alphonse. "I saw your name on the passenger list."

"Yes?" Alphonse appeared to find Dexter's manner a trifle unpleasant.

"Then you know," said Dexter hoarsely. "You know something has come over her. She is not—Edith. I did not know her. I had to go close to touch her arms before I could be sure. Heavens! man, what is it"

Alphonse shook off the man's plucking hand with a slight shrug of embarrassment.

"I'm sure—I'm afraid you will have to pardon me, Monsieur Dexter—an engagement—some friends inside—"

Suspicion
Dexter Asks Questions

The man would not be put off

"You know," he insisted. "You must know. When I saw her last she was—good heavens, man, you know what I mean. What's happened? Is there—has she—is it some other man?"

Lean chin swinging. Bony hands plucking. Eyes burning crazily in sockets that might have been wiped with smudgy fingers

"Monsieur Dexter," said Alphonse, his lips curling ever so little, "you ask of me a question that is not answered. I have known Madame, your wife, for a long time, yes. I do not understand you. She is looking very well, but there is no chance that should cause you to inflict a questionnaire upon an acquaintance. She——"

Dexter studied the cold face of Alphonse suspiciously. What he saw there must have convinced him, for he stepped back, an apology on his lips

"Then I must be—why yes. That's it. I'm seeing things—going a little bit balmy, perhaps. I've suspected as much several times lately. You'll forgive me, old man, seeing Edith unexpectedly—like this."

He laughed. Raquel drew closer to Alphonse. If she had ever heard insanity in a laugh it was at that moment. She or the man turn to follow, with a cunning that covered his intent the glamorous woman in the sultry red gown and the glittering gaiety of diamonds

"She'll get him back," said Raquel gleefully. "I know she will"

"Perhaps," Alphonse nodded, his voice dead of emotion "If she cares, she will. She has seen him. When she has tested of power with men, it may be she will find he is not worth reclaiming. He is far gone. Once he was handsome. He had the spark. It is gone. Not even the embers remain"

"But she loves him" "A no woman were fool enough to believe in the mirage called love. Mrs. Dexter, she knew, was one of them.

"She thinks she loves him," said Alphonse. "It may be she is only in love with love. One must wait until she finds him now that she has tasted the power of beauty. Many men will be at her feet. Did you see how they followed her with their eyes?"

"Him. Could they help doing so? She is so—startling."

Not a Fool
Raquel Insists

"Yes." Did the creator regret his work? "As they follow you, ma cherie. You have the spark too, the irresistible spark. You must not burn it out—as this man has done."

Raquel tossed her head, like a thoroughbred filly scenting the race

"No fear of that, Monsieur," she said. "I am not a fool".

"Non, petite. But one may be foolish without being a fool. The night life is such a splendid city has taken its toll of women wiser in the ways of the world than Mademoiselle Raquel And you love life—to dance—youth."

He was still fuming over the night at the Chateau Madrid with Bertie Adams. Over his failure to lend her to his will

"I like living, if that is what you mean," she said, lightly.

"One sees you at the gala ball wine. One sips it, inhales it for its rare bouquet."

"I am not yet a judge of good wine, Monsieur," Raquel laughed. "But I shall take your advice and be looking always for the rare bouquet."

His had played directly into her hands. Had enabled her to let him know that she would become her own judge of bouquets. That she would learn life's flavors through sipping and tasting. And base her preferences on experience

Of the opera—the passion of the human heart in song she quaffed deep. She could never, she felt, drink enough of it. She wanted to bathe in it. To go on letting it flow through her in a kind of exquisite hurt. To let her mind, to cry out with the joy of it. Her eyes lit with the infinite pain of it

"Will we come again?" she asked Alphonse in a small hushed voice when they joined the eddies and swirls of the human lake that gushed down the noble flight of steps and overflowed into the square in front of the majestic facade of the opera.

She gave his arm a grateful little squeeze

"Then I must work very hard and try to please you always," she said, in a rush of gratitude.

He patted her hand as a father might have done. And felt, in the leap of his pulses at his wrists and against the immaculate white collar beneath his rigidly held jaws, like anyone except a father.

Not Music
It Was Pandemonium

They had supper at a place called the Ambassadeurs, in a park.

She wished these people would not be so strident in their frivolity. They laughed too much and too loudly. Their movements were too fevered. There was too much color, too much froth, there were too many jewels

And music! Did they call this music? Thumping and whining and wailing and clashing. A medley of hateful noises, each voice striving to drown out the other. To pick and rasp along the nerve wires more ruthlessly than its rival.

Jazz! This was not music. It was pandemonium. Bedlam unleashed.

She danced with Alphonse. Her feet dragged. They were in revolt against the rhythm she ordered them to follow. She had never made such a failure of an attempt to translate rhythm into motion.

"You are tired;" Alphonse was at once solicitous.

"No." Tired, with the memory of that flood of song purling through her senses? "I can never be tired again."

"I understand," said Alphonse, kindly. "The opera would affect you that way. It did me. For a long time. It could again."

She did not hear him. Until he was saying, with a little twinkle of pride and amusement, "The eyes—they follow you. Already you are a sensation."

What's in Fashion?

Prints That Live!

—Directed by AMOS PARRISH—

NEW YORK, July 21—Yes . . . we know exactly how you feel. Of course you just have to have another printed dress. Sight? Right!

It's an irresistible urge, isn't it? Because they are so practical. So good-looking. So much in fashion. (We've just this minute come from the roof of the Ritz where we saw at least a dozen slick ones.)

We agree with you in your cheer for prints. And with the thousands of women who feel just as you do

A print is a good thing to buy right now for that extra dress. For two reasons at least

And second just between us and us and the fashion-post nows the time to find prints at bargain prices Lots of them Good ones, too

We've had a lot of check-ups made on fashions in prints. And found out that there are patterns that are just too good to die—despite the old adage that the good die young

Popular Patterns

These prints are appropriate Pleasing to look at. And women like them. So they're going to live quite a while. You can feel safe in getting them now

First . . . pin dots They've been one of the most popular of all prints. Simple, cool looking and tailored-looking for the street And easy to ensemble with your new fall coat, when you get it

Ensemble Well

Like the pin dot they're neat and simple enough to ensemble well. Especially when it's a bright spot of color on a dark background

The clever modern geometric second in the column is still a favorite When it's in two tones of one color it gives almost the effect of a monotone And that of course, makes it easy to carry out one color scheme in a costume And to ensemble your accessories

For a little more gaiety something to brighten up a dark coat . . . the small conventionalized flower is fine. It gets a bit of color in the blossom and another in the leaves And against a dark background is most effective

Dark Grounds

All the dark backgrounds have been going strong this summer And obviously are the best choice if you're going to wear these printed dresses in the fall small, spaced pattern

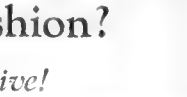
Black, navy or dark brown A black ground with white polka dots A navy ground with white and small figure A brown with white or dots



allover modern geometric

small conventional flowers

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Lovers and Husbands

THERE ARE two kinds of husbands, just as there are two kinds of houses, the kind that's a good paying investment—and the kind that is just a luxury

An optimist is a man who goes through life without an umbrella or a wife in the cheerful confidence that he can always borrow some other fellow's

All men may be born equal but all women will never get an even break, until they are a born blondes

When a man is thrown overboard he can always manage to float around until some other woman picks him up—or to swim ashore and land in some other woman's arms

Ain the moment a girl begins to take a lot of stock in a man's love confesses to declare any definite interest in him, he begins to lose

Nearly every man can get married who has the proper connection that a woman never can—unless she is to guide her; and nearly every woman goes to the altar under the supervision of a man needs a leader and a guardian And that's where the battle begins!

The only thing that gives to make the modern girl human is her to confess that she has never been kissed

Perfect lovers and good husbands, unlike poets, are not born but made WOMAN—indeed! Nearly every happily-married woman owes her felicity to some other woman's skill in the gentle arts of training or some other woman's mishpy.

The modern girl appears in spend most of her time either beautifying the flesh, shocking the world, or warning it's dead.

Many a man's virtue depends on the number of temptations that do not happen to come his way

Heart and Home -:- -:- -:- By Beatrice Fairfax

Cut Out the Drug Store

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX.

I am 17 and in love with a young man of 19. He goes to college and is very clever, also hasn't gone out with many girls Now he has told me he cares for me and has taken me out a great deal He also likes to talk about me to his people. I am a good cook and good housekeeper I'm through school and take good care of my sick mother, but this is the problem:

He works in a drug store near my home. I go in their quiet frequently and sometimes wait for him till 12 30 a. m. and he takes me home Do you think he'll lose his respect for me if I wait for him?

LONESOME.

Dear Lonesome: As long as you seem to have other opportunities of seeing your friend and talking to him, I don't believe it is required that you wait for him at the drug store. A drug store is almost as public as a street corner, and it is undignified to say the least to spend too much time there. If you explain how you feel, or show him this article, I am sure the young man will understand, and respect you for it

No, Let Him Apologize

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I have had a bad quarrel with my boy friend and I am still very angry with him. He is mostly to blame, although I admit I am somewhat in the wrong, but I don't care to apologize to him just now, as he would be sure to think I was "crawling back to him" or something like that. I have apologized for something I said, but I do not care to apologize first any more.

Fight the Battle for Love

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX

I am a girl old enough to know my own mind and considered good looking and popular. I am in love with a young man two years my senior. He was taken ill, and I learned through his sister, who is a very dear friend of mine, that his mother did not approve of our acquaintance For his sake, I refrained from keeping company with him, but after two months I find I cannot go on without him. Please advise me as to whether or not I should encourage him

PERPLEXED

Dear Perplexed: It is not your place to try to please his mother if he loves you he will fight that battle himself. You owe it to your self to attract a fine young man and hold him if you can, and let him settle the family matter You take it too much to avoid him, and think you are doing wrong to do so

GIRL FRIEND.

Dear Girl Friend: This is a situation in which neither I nor anyone else can help you. You must depend upon yourself and try to lift yourself out of your pitiful indecision in regard to this man. If it is true you are in love, and the young man does wish you, and if there is no real obstacle to your marriage, then you are a fortunate girl and should be willing to risk your fortune with a firm hand. Sometimes life doesn't repeat her opportunities. But if you love a man, and think you can continue to be swayed by ridicule, is it fair even to think of marriage with the poor young man?

Miss Fairfax will be pleased to answer readers' questions regarding love problems which may be troubling them. Write on one side of the paper only.

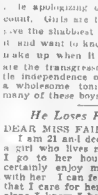
How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Value of Transfusions

EVERY OTHER group of workers has its organization. Why should we not have an organization for the protection of blood donors?



Dr. Copeland

In New York City every year there are about 11,000 transfusions, averaging about one pint of blood in each case About two years ago the blood givers organized the Volunteer Blood Donor Agency," in connection with New York Hospital. Later the "Blood Transfusion Betterment Association," was formed. The latter organization maintains offices where candidates are examined and selected, and where monthly reexaminations are held.

Women are not accepted. This is because their veins are too small and, as a rule, they do not stand the loss of blood as readily as men. Donors are chosen, not alone with reference to their physical health and the condition of the veins at the elbow, but also for their appearance and good character

References to this form of treatment are found in the writings of ancient Egyptians and Romans. It is known that in 1492 the Pope received blood from three donors

For many years blood transfusions have not been uncommon. Since the World War, however, they have become an important factor in medical treatment.

This story does not mean much to most of you. But there are many cases where this procedure is essential to the life of the patient. There are times when the must have supplied immediately a quantity of good, rich blood

Of course you know the term "blood transfusion" means the transfer of blood from the circulation of one living person into that of another. Transfusions are given to replace the blood lost by hemorrhage after an accident or operation, or by hemorrhage in cases of internal ulcer

This treatment is indicated, too in diseases like pernicious anemia and other conditions accompanying deterioration of the blood. In many infections it may be helpful It is given in cases of illuminating gas poisoning.

Transfusions are given sometimes to increase the resistance before a serious operation. The fresh, health-giving blood promotes the prospect of recovery

Science has progressed in its study of this subject so that there attends the transfusion very little trouble with that of the patient. He exercises care that too great a quantity of blood is not given By proper technique he prevents the passage of a bubble of air or a blood clot into the body of his patient.

You can see that while it is unusual, it is a method of treatment that has great importance in a desperate case

Some Girls Are Man-Shy Even in This Age

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

EVEN IN our free-and-easy age there are girls who are very much man-shy.

Sometimes it is the girl who is the victim of a charmingly feminine reserve and who are actually the most delightful of friends sweet hearts or wives who become utterly unnatural as soon as a boy crosses the threshold

Beatrice Fairfax

They are tongue-tied, they say queer awkward things Or, worst of all, the poor young creatures try too hard to [illegible] A boy comes to the house and rushes off to call on some [illegible] who may be half an hour late as used to boys and who knows how to treat them

The man-shy girl has a hard time

She suffers because she cannot play the game. I mean of course the game of youth. She doesn't know how to conduct an easy, exciting friendship with a boy, or how to accept the first signs of romantic interest or, in fact, to act her part in a world that is half men and half women

To tell the horrible truth, she is very likely to become an unwilling and therefore unhappy old maid

Now, if you are a mother, don't think it can happen to your daughter

A girl who associates naturally with both boys and girls from childhood up, and whose home is always hospitably open to young people, never develops man-shyness It simply isn't possible.

When a boy appears, it doesn't [illegible] to pay to change her manner [illegible] to make further attempts to entertain and flatter him. She isn't afraid of him. She doesn't like him. She doesn't admire him more than he deserves. She sees him pretty much as he is.

When a girl like this marries she sees that she is about. Unless she happens to be in love with him she doesn't marry the first man that asks her, just because she is embarrassed and thinks she ought to be obliging

With what people used to call "the right man" comes along, she knows it. And, in the frank, direct fashion, she meets him [illegible] and they are both happy. They have [illegible] for ever after

P. S. dear absent-minded mother of a well loved little girl—don't wait too long.

Remember that in a moment more, so to speak, she will be at the impressionable age.

If you want her to reach 16 in the [illegible] unhurt and unscathed as man [illegible] have a part time change.

[illegible] and friends are girls and boys [illegible] I don't deny it. But play the game. I mean of course the game of youth. She doesn't know how to conduct an easy, exciting friendship with a boy, or how to accept the first signs of romantic interest or, in fact, to act her part in a world that is half men and half women

Wearing Our New Clothes

By JOSEPHINE HUDDLESTON

Josephine Huddleston

I WONDER [illegible] much enjoyment out of reading the new beauty articles [illegible] them? I was just thinking that only last year at this time I was so interested in learning how to put on my clothes these graceful ways when [illegible] about skirts and today we cannot talk about how to rise and sit gracefully without getting all tangled up in our long hem lines!

With the new styles we've [illegible] simply got to get over slouching and lounging and sitting on our feet I know it's comfortable, but only because we have permitted our bodies to become accustomed to those positions. A little training in the new way in which they should be poised and we will be equally at ease. But I will take some conscious training.

Then, too, I think we should have our new frocks around us in the privacy of our own room and do a little sitting and standing in front of the mirror before we can know just what needs to be changed.

The long bouffant frocks are usually managed than the long draped ones because we've been wearing the bouffant type for evening for several seasons now. But the longer skirts for informal occasions, particularly with sports models, are the ones that trip us to cause beauty disaster if we don't watch out. Of course, work sports clothes are very little longer than last season, and I don't think they will worry us as much as those chosen for formal sports wear

But it is necessary to don the frock and note carefully how it falls and what it does as you sit down or rise. Circular skirts are a way of falling into the most awkward lines unless they are properly managed, and this means, of course, watching the position of the body.

By experimenting a bit before wearing the new clothes into view of the general public these ungraceful postures can be avoided, and so also the bride's aunt, who has asked me to attend with her.

RUTH.

Q—If the wedding is in the daytime, wear an informal day dress, and (such as, for instance, you would wear to a tea party) and, if the evening wear a dress that might be classified as a "dinner dress."

A—In this case, I should not think that it would be at all necessary that you send a gift. You might, if you wish to register special graciousness, send a box of flowers on the morning of the wedding.

Refusing a Wedding Invitation

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN

Will you kindly give me the correct form to be used when refusing a wedding invitation? Is it necessary to give an excuse?

READER.

You don't say if the invitation is [illegible] for the ceremony in the church. If it is, to be exact one says to see the honor of your presence—it is not necessary that you state a date.

But if you have received an invitation to the reception also, or if the invitation is for a home wedding, this is the form for the regret:

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Gregory regret that they are unable to accept Mr. and Mrs. (brides parents) kind invitation for Tuesday, the first of August.

If you wish to give the reason, it is most polite to do so, although this is not strictly necessary. Then the regret reads

Regret that because of absence from town they are unable to accept etc

Registering Special Graciousness

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

I—I have been asked (verbally) to attend an informal home wedding. What should I wear?

II—Is it necessary to send a gift? I have never met either the bride or the bridegroom, but I am a friend of the bride's aunt, who has asked me to attend with her.

RUTH.

This Day in History

This is the anniversary of the attack on the Spanish Armada by Drake, July 21, 1588. The destruction of Philip's big fleet marked the beginning of the downfall of Spain as a great power in the affairs of Europe.

Do You Know—

A modern cargo pier costing $4,000,000 will be erected by Canada at Vancouver, B. C.

Sues canal dues will be reduced September 1, due to increased receipts of the past year.

White fox furs valued at $150,000 have been flown from the ice-bound vessel Nanuk to Fairbanks, Alaska

STOCKS REACT IN WALL ST. DEALINGS

New York, July 21—Mutiny in the ranks of the bull forces threw share prices into retreat in today's stock market, interrupting the irregular advance of the past four weeks which had retaken about a third of the ground lost between early April and late June.

The new bull recruits demanded something more substantial than the frothy pabulum of forecasts of business improvement, but as the month of July is normally a barren area in the business year, the dividends were not due.

TRADING IS MODERATE

Profit taking and renewed bear forays drove shares prices generally one to five points lower on Saturday, however, was in moderate volume. Today's reaction had been foreshadowed on Saturday.

Reactionary tendencies in the grain and cotton markets discouraged the bull leaders from offering aggressive resistance to the decline, but brokerage house gossip had it that bull pools were extending their holdings by purchases on scale down.

The selling was for the most part well absorbed. A reaction of at least technical proportions might be expected at this stage of an advance, and bulls were concerned.

News appearing over the week-end for the most part only served to delineate more clearly the current quiet in industry. Reports generally indicated, however, that retail trade was holding up relatively well for this time of year.

The first of the large railway systems to report for June was Chesapeake & Ohio, which showed a decline in gross operating income of 8.1 per cent from the like month of a year ago, somewhat in excess of the decline for the entire first half-year, which was 6.4 per cent.

FOOD EARNINGS

Beechnut Packing's first half report served further to attest the relative stability of food company earnings, as on a net of $2.72 a share, against $1.79. The recession in building was reflected in a drop of 16¢ per cent in Celotex's first half net. Standard Statistics Co. stated that the first 44 companies to report for the first half showed a drop from last year of about 19 per cent.

There was little change in the money market. Call loans were again at 2 per cent officially, but were reported as 1½ per cent in outside market, against 2¼ Friday, when eagerness to employ funds over the week-end resulted in an unusual surplus of offerings. Other monetary accommodations were steady.

Several issues rallied by early afternoon, as the market turned extremely active, and recovered to have been completed. Losses of 2 points recorded during the morning in issues like U. S. Steel, American Telephone and American Can were partially regained.

Such issues as Canadian Pacific and Worthington Pump recovered early losses and recorded moderate gains. A. W. Harris, Jr., and Alex Briggs, as sponsors of the market in the issue endeavored to move it a few points of its favorable earnings statement published late last week.

Oils also turned upward, Standard of N. J. and Houston recovering losses of the morning.

The Rails mostly heavy, Union Pacific, Chesapeake & Ohio and New York Central lost 2 to more than 4. American Rolling Mill, Nash Motors and Columbian Carbon lost 3 or more. Electric Auto Lite, in which a pool is said to be active, sold off nearly 4, then rallied. Radio lost more than a point.

The market weakened substantially under the pressure of short selling in the last hour, losing most of 2 to 5 points had developed in leading stocks. U. S. Steel, American Can, Vanadium, Johnson, New York Central and North American soon yielded 3 to 4, while Westinghouse Electric, American Telephone, Du Pont and American Tobacco "B" were quoted a couple of points net lower. J. C. Case broke approximately 10. The close was weak.

50 Most Active Stocks Are Higher

Chicago, July 21. The 50 most active stocks traded on the Chicago Stock Exchange during the week ended July 19, in a market value of $2,588,901,728 at the close of business Saturday, as compared with $2,693,203,621 at the close of the previous week, according to a compilation by Ole Olsen. The components are increase of $92,598,107 or 3.71 per cent.

Olis & Co's analysts shows that 33 of these stocks were listed and traded in last year. These stocks had a market value of $1,443,585,864 Saturday as compared with $1,594,178,154 on July 20, 1928, a decrease of $150,592,290 or 9.41 per cent.

It's Tourists Who Keep Postman Busy

Jasper Park, Alberta, July 21—It's the tourists who keep the postman busy. Allowed ten days the average tourist sends 50 postcards from Jasper Park Lodge, says John O'Brien, the manager. Often the tourist will write postcards but not written to or heard from for years.

NEWS OF Trends of the Day BOSTON New York Curb MARKETS

STOCKS MOVE DOWNWARD IN BOSTON

Prices were at lower levels in dull trading on the Boston Stock Exchange today. Losses ranged from fractions to two points or more. Closing prices were above the lows for the day. Gillette dropped 2 points and then rallied. General Electric was up 1¼ from the day's low.

Point or more issues were shown by the following issues: American Pneumatic, Atchison and Nash. New England Telephone dropped 2¾. New Haven eased 1¾ and American Founders was at a new low figure.

Boston Elevated first preferred was over a point higher. Utilities Equities preferred added a point and Eastern Massachusetts Street Railway adjustment was up a like amount.

Boston Personal Property Trust, the oldest investment trust of its kind in the country, had an asset value of $29.40 a share for the 260,560 shares on July 2 compared with $32.47 on May 31; $29.88 on December 31, 1929, and $39.30 on August 1, 1929, the latter the highest asset value reached. The advance of the stock market since July 2 indicates that current asset value is above $30 a share, against a quoted price on the Boston Stock Exchange of 23½.

Funds were distributed on July 2 as follows:

	Mkt. Value	Cost
U S Lib bonds..	$100,937	$97,812
Pub Util securi	2,395,515	1,174,224
Industrials	2,859,147	1,609,793
Railroads	1,321,910	1,277,372
Real Estate.....	356,221	417,627
Banks	364,607	203,924
Textiles	99,388	99,388
Total	7,588,029	5,028,241

At their recent lows bank stocks were not selling on as high a yield basis as during other recent periods of unemployment. A list of 12 New York and Boston issues yielded an average of 3.62 per cent, as against 6.38 per cent at the lowest prices of 1921, 4.59 per cent in 1914 and 4.46 per cent in 1907.

Thus bank stock prices would have to decline almost another 50 per cent before their yields would equal those of 1921. This is true at all a logical expectation, however, due to the far greater strength of the banking system now, compared with 1921. Member banks are now all but out of debt to the Federal Reserve, good business and within a few million dollars of their record high and Federal Reserve ratios are at almost their highest levels.

4000 ITEMS IN WHOLESALE CUT

Chicago, July 21—Drastic cuts in wholesale prices of more than 4000 merchandise items were announced today by Butler Brothers, largest wholesalers of general merchandise in the United States.

The new prices are contained in the August catalogue, and embrace practically every line handled by the company. This action is officially characterized as "one of the most inclusive downward revisions of prices in the history of American merchandising."

Frank J. Cunningham, president of Butler Brothers, in announcing the action, said that it was taken in the hope of establishing a new low price level that could be accepted by the public as stable.

"The public in many localities is on sale," Mr. Cunningham said. "People are expecting lower prices. They are not willing to buy goods at last spring's figures. We are offering our merchant customers the lowest prices in months, and in many instances in years, and are recommending that they pass these on to the public.

"The situation affecting American business today is largely psychological. Everybody is expecting lower prices, due to the general knowledge that markets are soft, and they won't be happy until they get them. Therefore we are making the first move, and are pointing the way to our wholesalers and manufacturers by which the long delayed consumption of goods might be given impetus."

Copper at 11-Cent Level Delivered

Copper is obtainable in practically every direction in the domestic market at 11 cents delivered. Some of the copies are either out of the market or quoting 11¼ in instances where they do not want to take business, but are offering at 11 cents to their regular customers.

With the domestic price ¼-cent under the European parity, little business has been done for export since Friday. The indication is that foreign metal will soon be brought into line with the domestic in the next day or two.

Electrolytic for domestic shipment is 11 cents a pound, delivered to the end of September. European destinations remain unchanged at 11.55 cents, c. i. f., Hamburg, Havre and London.

Intertype Report Out

Intertype Corporation reports for quarter ended June 30 net income of $128,307 after depreciation and reserve for taxes, against $217,778 in the second quarter of 1929. For six months ended June 30 net income was $303,797, against $413,476 in the first half of 1929.

Cotton Spindleage Figures Are Given

Washington, July 21 (INS)—The Census Bureau today announced that on June 30 last there were 34,135,988 cotton spinning spindles in place in the United States, of which 27,642,158 were operated at some time during the month, compared with 28,374,434 for May and 30,631,800 for June a year ago. The aggregate number of active spindle hours reported for the month was 5,778,524,384.

Salt Earnings of Half-Year Are Up

International Salt Co. reports for six months ended June 30 profit of $322,901 after charges and bond sinking fund, but before federal taxes, against $231,246 in first half of 1929.

CURB MARKET SELLS OFF SHARPLY

New York, July 21—Heavy selling in the last half-hour of trading turned the curb market sharply lower today.

During most of the session the list ranged moderately under realizing, but in the late dealings the bear faction again became active and succeeded in forcing prominent shares 1 to nearly 5 points net lower.

Electric Bond and Share was off almost 5, while American Gas and Electric and American and Foreign Power, Warranta, Deere and Aviation Corporation of the Americas broke about 4 each.

Cities Service, Transamerica and Goldman Sachs trading lost a couple of points.

Fall River Gas Is to Increase Stock

Fall River Gas Works stockholders will meet Aug. 18 to vote on increasing capital stock by 18,230 shares (approximately one new share for each five now outstanding) which would be offered at $37.50. Purpose of the new issue is to retire floating debt of $495,000 incurred for additions and improvements. Rights are quoted at $3, with $54 bid for the stock.

Melting Steel Lower

Heavy melting scrap steel is quoted at $12 to $12.25 a ton, a decline of 25 cents in the maximum range. Market is strictly nominal.

Advice Is Free

Before you buy or sell stocks or bonds, you ought to secure unbiased expert advice. Send your investment inquiries with stamp to Frank H. Mcloon, Financial Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston. All replies are made by mail direct.

UNITED FRUIT

I. L. K., Back Bay.—I enclose a list of my stocks and bonds. Should I add 100 shares of United Fruit?

Ans.—The purchase is regarded as suitable for you.

ANOTHER STOCK

W. M., Lynn.—I am a reader of your paper and have been the recipient of excellent advice. I own $3000 Prudence Company 5½s, $1000 each S. W. Straus first mortgage 6s and New York Title & Mortgage 5½s, 10 shares each Bethlehem Steel 7 per cent preferred and Electric Power & Light first preferred. I have $3000 in a savings bank and want your opinion of Cities Service preferred.

Ans.—Cities Service preferred, paying $6 annually, is sound. The company controls important public utility, oil and natural gas properties. In recent years earnings have been on an upward trend. You could get 15 shares for less than $1400; annual income $900. This leaves over $1600 for the savings bank. You can count on the income from the securities you already own.

$10,000 TO INVEST

D. K., Worcester.—I am a reader of your paper and need assistance. How I invest $10,000 to bring more income than savings bank interest?

Ans.—For less than $8200 you could get $2500 each Prudence Company 5½s and Steneck Trust 5½s; 10 shares each Bush Terminal debenture, Devoe & Raynolds first preferred and 15 Kansas City Southern preferred. The combined annual income from this list is $475. You will have close to $1800 left in the savings bank for emergencies.

LONG RECORD

M. R., Boston.—I am a reader of your paper. What would you say to a purchase of New York Central? Are earnings good?

Ans.—New York Central has paid dividends in varying amounts since 1870; current annual $8 rate from 1927. Net for 1929 was $16.39 a share, compared with $10.86 a share in 1928 and $13.90 in 1927. In the first quarter of current year net profits of $4.79 a share contrasted with $3.32 on a smaller number of shares outstanding in similar period of 1929. The yield now is about 5 per cent. Does that interest you? How much cash have you?

BROKERS SAY BUY NOW

Hornblower & Weeks, one of the leading investment and brokerage houses, with offices at all important financial centers of the country, is issuing a special record random setting forth their views on the stock market, business conditions and the outlook, the theme of which is "Buy sound, standard American stocks now."

They are supporting their belief that stock purchases now will show substantial profits this year, with a national advertising campaign in all the leading newspapers of the country from coast to coast.

"They point out in their special memorandum that purchasing policies cannot persistently decline in the face of cheap money, cheap commodities, abundant labor, and that seasonal recovery is reasonably certain. Call money rates have declined from 20 per cent in March, 1929, to 1½ per cent.

With business improving, sentiment will improve, business men will buy stocks and, other things being equal, prices will advance, they add. This year, forecasting, they emphasize, other things and better than equal with prices low and money cheap.

Therefore, they conclude that industry will have more money on deposit for any length of time at 1¼ per cent when sound dividend paying stocks can be purchased to net from 5 to 6 per cent, and that now is the time to anticipate a revival in sentiment and trends, and buy stocks at market, holding them for substantial profits which they expect this year.

Collins & Aikman Earnings Hold Up

New York, July 21—Net profit of Collins & Aikman Corp. in second quarter of its fiscal year, based on orders booked, is likely to be about the same as in first quarter, when net profit was $759,081, equal after preferred dividends to $1.01 a share on 675,000 shares of common stock. Net for the first half should thus be around $2 a share, against net of $1,823,236, or $2.69 a share, in fiscal year ended March 1, 1930, and $1,905,555, or $1.85 a share, in fiscal year 1929.

The sharp improvement in showing made this year in face of adverse business conditions is due to more efficient management and operation, and to larger volume of business obtained. There has been a 14 per cent increase in use of pile fabrics for automobile seat coverings in first half of calendar year. August is likely to show a seasonal upturn, when fall production of automobiles starts.

Dome Mines, Ltd.

Dome Mines, Ltd., reports for six months ended June 30 net of $48,923 after federal taxes, but before depreciation and depletion, against $1,208,895 in first half of 1929.

We consider the present market favorable for investment in standard American Securities. Our belief is based upon facts presented in a special memorandum which we have prepared and which will be sent upon request.

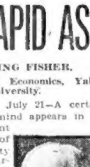
Rate of Drop in Commodities Shows Depression Not Serious as Thought

PRICE-SLUMP ONLY THIRD AS RAPID AS IN 1920-21

By IRVING FISHER,
Professor of Economics, Yale University.

New haven, July 21—A certain confusion of mind appears in recent comment on the fall in the commodity price level during the past year. It is stated that we are "headed for a restoration of pre-war price levels" and that this should end the inflation of prices produced by the war. It is not sufficiently understood that the fact that the level is not, of itself, significant as affecting the so-called business cycle. What is significant is how fast the price level changes, either up or down. When the change is rapid and violent, either up or down, people are sure to suffer.



Irving Fisher

That the fall in commodity prices during the past year was the most powerful factor in the present business depression is, however, widely recognized. It has amounted to slightly more than 1 per cent a month since July, 1929. Pessimists view the situation with alarm and comparisons have been freely made with the business depression of 1920-21.

These comparisons are unfair. The chart herewith shows that for the year from July, 1920, to June, 1921, the fall in the commodity price level was three times swifter than during the corresponding months of 1929-1930. Yet when the price level remained at the bottom of that fall, business picked up in 1922, and 1923 recorded the most prosperous year known in this country to that date.

YIELD STEADY LEVEL

This prosperity was maintained without the unhealthy stimulation of a rising commodity price level during the following seven years, although stock prices rose rapidly and far. In July, 1929, the gain in buying power of the dollar, caused by the issue of fewer dollars, or credits, in proportion to a given quantity of goods, again began to cause recessions in commodity prices and trade.

For society as a whole, and in the long run, both gains and losses in dollar purchasing power are, of course, evils. The dollar of the stick should remain constant in its measurement of buying power. The elimination of business from changing prices, for instance, does not mean a benefit to all classes. It means an abnormal profit for the profit-taker, or "profiteer," at the expense of his creditors and employees; in the long run even the profit-taker is usually injured.

WHEN ONE SIDE LAGS

The reason for this is simple. When manufacturers get higher prices for their finished products they do not at first have to pay correspondingly higher wages and salaries. They do rent and interest rise at once. This lagging behind of interest, rent, salaries, wages—not to mention raw materials, which usually lag for a somewhat different reason—is inevitable because the laggards are fixed by contracts or understandings.

Evidently the lagging of these important elements of expense practically involves a lagging of total expenses behind total receipts. Consequently money profits, the excess of receipts over expenses, tend to be increased. Reversely, falling prices hurt profits, as the record of the past year bears witness.

Since the profit-taker is the captain of industry, on whose decision depends the rate of output, it is further inevitable that when profits increase, industry is expanded and business booms; while, when profits decrease, industry is contracted and business is depressed. This was observed as to the long period of gains in dollar buying power after the Civil War, culminating in 1896; and again as to the long period of "deflation," that is, losses in dollar buying power beginning in 1896 and culminating, in England and the United States, in 1920; and again as to the rapid "inflation," that is, decrease in the buying power of the dollar in part of war Germany; and again as to the drastic deflation of money of 1920-21 in United States and the severe depressions of the wholesale price level since then.

MISSED RATE OF CHANGE

But, strangely enough, until recently such observations have not been made when the subject considered has been the business cycle, implying a see-saw of booms and depression. The chief reason why the abnormal price levels, either up or down, used to be missed so completely by the forecasters was that they missed the clear distinction between high prices and rising prices, and, likewise, between low prices and falling prices. In short, they scrutinized the price level, but not the speed at which it changed. Finding no similarity in the curves representing the price level and the cause of business activity, they did not see how the changes in the price level could explain the variations in the volume of business. Had they instead compared the curve rate of change in the price level and the curve showing the volume of trade, they would have found a marked similarity.

Studies of many commodities in the past warrant the belief that the current depression in business is the mild expression which has been brought about by a lowering in the commodity price level less than a third as rapid as during the 1920-21 depression. In this respect it compares more nearly with the milder recessions of 1924 and 1927.

CURIOUS CREATURES

—By RICHARD A. ADDISON—

WE USUALLY THINK OF HAWKS AS FLESH EATERS, BUT THERE ARE HAWKS IN EUROPE AND ASIA THAT PREFER HONEY AND THE LARVAE OF HONEY BEES TO MOST OTHER KINDS OF FOOD —THEY WILL, HOWEVER, EAT SOME OF THE SMALLER ANIMALS.

Stepdaughters of War personal habits, and my underclothing should be common knowledge. Outwardly I am Smithy, assistant cook; inwardly I am nothing. I have no feelings that are not physical. I dislike being too hot or too cold.

My body is healthy; my mind negative. I have no love or hate for anyone. Long ago I ceased to love Roy; long ago I ceased to hate my mother. Both processes were gradual. I was content to drift along in the present. The past has gone, I have no future—I want no future. With this mental atrophy my physical fear has vanished, for fear cannot exist when one is indifferent to life.

The droning of the enemy planes that makes the night noiser than the days leaves me unmoved where once it petrified me with a nameless horror; the ceaseless pounding of the guns has no more effect on me than the hidden drums of an orchestra—for I have no nerves. Automatically I bathe my body, automatically I converse with my fellow-workers, automatically I write letters, obey orders, eat and sleep—a flesh and blood case containing nothing save the machinery that keeps Smith, Assistant Cook, alive.

Spring—Cheery and Blimey singing over the vegetables as though they were primroses and daffodils. Even Misery not grousing for once. And I do not care.

Spring—soft breezes on our wet hands instead of cutting winds that chap and crack our skins. Tender sun forcing its way through white, impudent clouds—slits of blue widening and widening. And I do not care.

"Ad a new chap," says Cheery, "blow the new 'at."

"I've finished the third corner of my crochet bedspread," says Misery. "Turned the corner last night."

Cheery and Blimey are sprucing up. Blimey has discarded the issue hat which has never suited her little sharp face and has become the proud possessor of a softer, more becoming shape.

Cheery and Blimey argue about most things—but on one point they agree emphatically—it's a jolly good war and they hope it goes on forever. They will probably get their wish. They both derive from large families living in two small rooms in a crowded slum district and they still revel in the luxury of a bath to themselves. At first they mistrusted the long rows of bathrooms but now they are immersed at every available opportunity.

Blimey has developed into a "Sagie-N-Nut." She has cut her hair in imitation of mine, her skirt is a fraction shorter than the others', and her burberry a few shades lighter. At church parade she wears yellow wash leather gloves with the cuffs turned back from the wrists and a yellow crepe de chine handkerchief tucked coyly into her sleeve.

Her stockings are well-fitting and her shoes as highly polished as those of any girl in a well-known boot-polish advertisement. Her teeth protrude slightly but they are even and white. Until she became a WAAC she had never cleaned them, but now she does it several times daily. It is her staple topic of conversation.

This personal cleanliness and extravagance of dress is not for mere show. It is a commercial proposition, the capitalist would speak, that Blimey is putting into her business—the business of, marrying the first subaltern who my she can ensnare. For as Blimey shrewdly says, you get it all ways—

"If 'e comes through the war 'e works and keeps yer; if 'e won't work an' keep yer 'e gets sued for maintenance; if 'e gets wounded 'e gets pensioned; an' if 'e's killed there's yer widow's allowance—yer can't go wrong."

Which is why Blimey enlisted. At home she had no wages to buy clothes. Her father took every penny she earned. She is refreshingly frank about it—unlike most of the others who joined up in the sacred name of patriotism.

"Dirty lot o' liars," Blimey calls them, and takes a fiendish delight in winning the confidence of the flag-waggers until she unearths their real motive, which she then discloses without the slightest compunction to the world—

"Joined up to help win the war—wer me fook—joined up to do it on 'er ma for wallopin' 'er for comin' 'ome at midnight with a soldier. Patriotic me eye!" or when she hears someone boasting, "'Ere, is yer trumpeter dead?"

My sister-WAACS are certainly not backward in blowing their own trumpets. The newspapers, the recruiting officers, and the army out here have told them they are noble creatures, and they resent not being patted on the back all the time. The band must go on playing for the Mutual Admiration Society. When the music fades to a pianissimo passage they help it out with a concerted chorus of self-praise.

"We're each releasing men to fight, don't forget—many of us doing her bit for the country—the slackers at home ought to see us—good job they're started tribunals for the men hanging back—pity they haven't got them for women, too."

"DOUBLING FOR LOVE," Winifred Van Duser's great story, will start in the Boston Evening American Wednesday.

South Boston Girl, 3, Dying of Burns

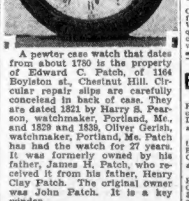
Daily Antique No. 150



A pewter cas watch that dates from about 1760 is the property of Edward C. Patch, of 1164 Boylston st., Chestnut Hill. Citizen repair shops are carefully concealed in back of case. They are dated 1821 by Harry S. Pepson, watchmaker, Portland, Me., and 1829 and 1839, Oliver Gerish, watchmaker, Portland, Me. Patch has had the watch for 27 years. It was formerly owned by his father, James Patch, who received it from his father, Henry Clay Patch. The original owner was John Patch. It is a key winder.

Boston Evening American is publishing daily photographs of interesting antiques. Owners of antiques of Colonial or early American origin or of historic association are invited to forward photographs and records for publication. If a photograph is not available, the American will send a cameraman to photograph the antique, providing the owner lives in Greater Boston. Address the Antique Editor, Boston Evening American, 5 Winthrop sq., Boston, Mass.

Britain and Japan Tie Up U. S. Navy Under London Pact

Senator Moses of New Hampshire rightfully denounces the restrictions imposed by the London naval treaty upon the type of cruisers the United States can build as "a piece of colossal effrontery on the part of those who sat with us at the conference table."

Instead of leaving the United States free to build within tonnage limitation agreed upon the type of cruiser our highest naval authorities insist is best suited to our needs, the treaty compels us to build as the British admiralty dictates.

The humiliating situation in which Uncle Sam will find himself when this treaty has been jammed through to ratification was thus illustrated by Senator Moses. He said:

"It is, Mr. President, as if you said to me, 'Take your own money and buy yourself a dozen 13-inch collars.' To which I might retort that 13-inch collars do not fit me; that I cannot wear them and that I do not want to spend any money for them. But you, Sir, insist and I am compelled to buy the 13-inch collars which I cannot wear and for which I have no use."

By the terms of this indefensible treaty the British admiralty tells the American Congress to take the American people's own money and buy them some six-inch gun cruisers, in spite of the fact that the six-inch gun cruiser is not suited to the defense of American commerce and cannot be used as a substitute for the eight-inch gun cruiser on such a mission.

That is why our highest naval authorities do not want the American people to spend any money for the six-inch gun cruiser, which is so well suited to British needs, but not at all suited to American requirements.

But the British government, aided and abetted by the Japanese government, stipulated as the price of a treaty at London that they should build as they preferred, but that the United Stated should build as they permitted.

Guarding Your Money

Some "Commandments" for the Investor

In the news columns you are reading the exclusive and unusual portrayal of how innocent people of Massachusetts are being mulcted of fifty millions of dollars annually in shady and fake stock transactions.

The State, it seems, is rising to its task in this matter.

Valueless stock issues are being recalled or estopped. Suave and dishonest salesmen, whose glib tongues have talked credulous families out of their life's savings, are being required to forfeit their licensed opportunity to prey upon the public.

For the good they may do the public, trusting people who have seen their little fortunes erased are now discussing their sad experiences frankly. The lifelong prudence which had enabled them to acquire a stake sufficient to carry them on in comfort had been overcome usually by the glittering attractions held out to them by barefaced promoters who bore the seal and sanction of the Commonwealth.

In this connection the Athol Savings Bank has issued a list of "Ten Commandments," calculated to serve those who are sorely beset by the temptation to put their money into securities that are superficially attractive, but actually worthless. These "commandments" are homely, but sensible. Read them, cut them out and pass them along:

3—Don't buy stocks in untried inventions. Most inventors and promoters have good intentions—but you know what is paved with good intentions.

5—Before buying stocks in new manufacturing methods, consult an expert. Take your time.

6—"Sleep over" every proposed investment. Don't crowd. The wild cat stock salesman who says "it may be too late" means it may be too late for him if you investigate first.

8—When somebody whispers that he has a "straight tip" put your hands over both ears, and go away from there. You may be "let in" on the ground floor, and later crawl out the cellar window under the wreckage.

9—Few rich men speculate in stocks that are not on the exchange. That's why they are rich. Don't think you know more than they do.

10—Don't buy stock of a new company just because some other company made a mint of money in the same line. Ford made a fortune out of the "flivver," don't let a stock salesman make a "flivver" out of your savings.

What Do You Know?

BOSTON'S ORIGINAL KNOWLEDGE TEST

Do you know:

1. What does Whitsunday commemorate?
2. From what opera does the Pilgrims' Chorus come?
3. What style of architecture is Notre Dame, Paris?
4. What distinguished French woman painter wore male attire?
5. How large in inches is a .32 caliber bullet?
6. In golf, what is a birdie?
7. What is the first line of "The Old Oaken Bucket"?
8. Who in the Bible story was turned into a pillar of salt?
9. What is a shako?
10. What is margin in stock market phraseology?

Match correctly:

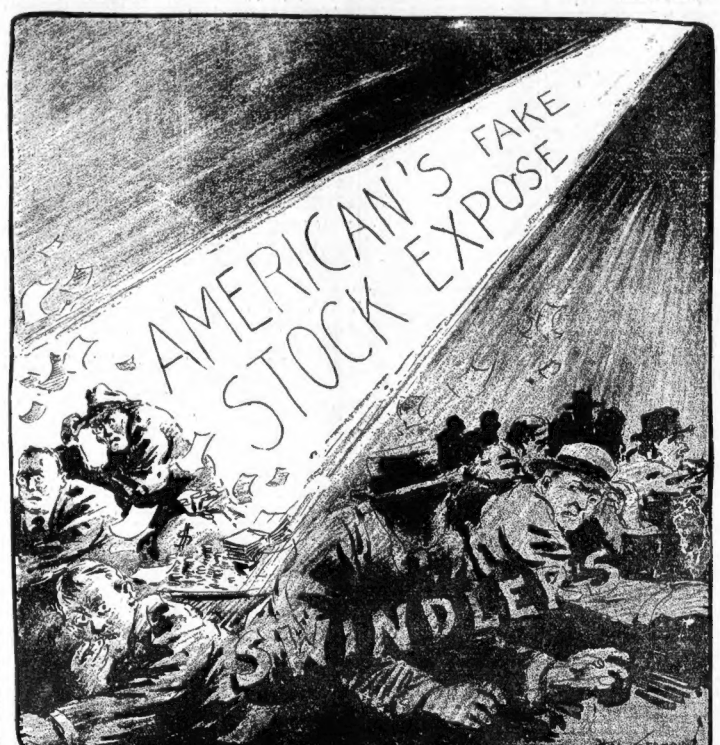
11. Calescent	A deep wide trench
12. Moat	A light spear
13. Harridan	Obliterate
14. Javelin	A vixenish woman
15. Efface.	Increasing in heat

Answers to today's test:

1. Descent of the Holy Ghost. 2. Tannhauser, by Wagner. 3. Gothic. 4. Rosa Bonheur. 5. 32-100 of an inch. 6. Making a hole in one under par. 7. "How dear to this heart are the scenes of my childhood." 8. Lot's wife. 9. A military hat. 10. A percentage of the price of stocks deposited with the broker who makes the purchase for his principal. 11. Increasing in heat. 12. A deep wide trench. 13. A vixenish woman. 14. A light spear. 15. Obliterate.

THIS KIND HATE THE LIGHT

By HAL COFFMAN



Swindlers and fakers of worthless stocks hate the light of exposure turned on their crooked graft. If a slick-appearing salesman with a convincing line of chatter tries to sell you "a sure thing"—"get rich quick"—"let you in on the ground floor"—and investigate what he is supposed to be selling. Money is hard to earn and is just as hard to properly invest. Ask your savings bank or some one in a position to know, before you turn your savings over to some glib talker. If it was so good, he would keep it himself. H. C.

McINTYRE ABROAD -:- By O. O. McIntyre

LONDON, JULY 21—I suppose everyone who flies from Brussels to the Croyden field in England is heartened in those sinking and breathless moments of fear by Col. Lindbergh's historic achievement. All perhaps but the obese and Teutonic wordling who slept blissfully in our plane from the take off until awakened at landing.

London as usual was under murky skies upon our arrival, but even through the fog one could discern that the town, like Paris, has gone modernistic. The horse shoe circle of the Savoy has been done over in the mode as are innumerable shops along Piccadilly and the Strand. Everywhere is a rash of modernism.

Far more excellent writers, well, a little better anyway, than this chronicler have paid tribute to "The Cries of London" and their shrill never loses an appeal. The Strand seems to have an extra din just now, for hundreds of the unemployed are resorting to catch-penny schemes along the curbs.

There was a shock in seeing one tattered and grotesque creature with elaborate gestures mouthing and gulping handful after handful of colored tissue paper, afterward passing the hat "for my starving kiddies." Yet an hour of cheerless unemployment debate in Parliament is convincing Britain is "treading water."

Everybody seems to avoid talking directly about the economic crisis, but everywhere depressing poverty rears its hideous head. Such as in front of one of the Trafalgar Square lions where a beggar, resembling King George, executes a sinister dance to a mouth organ tune, rattling a spoon and fork with horrid spectre-like precision, very slow.

I caught sight of Henry Sell bobbing along Regent street, very swank in his new Saville Row finery, sporting the latest Locke hat and holding his umbrella at the correct angle. He was every inch the English "toff, but he didn't fool a newsie who popped out to cry: "Chicago Tribune, sir!"

London is a leisurely walking town. Before the stores open in the morning streets and bridges fill with strollers. The London merchant coming in from the suburb alights a station or two away from his office door to window gaze and perhaps peep longingly at the wet grass green of the embankment.

Hannen Swaffer, the captious critic, rushing by hesitated long enough to tell of an old lady in Ampstead Eath who was taken with pains on the appendicitis side. The new district medico was called in, made examinations, quieted fears and went his way. That evening the old lady remarked to her daughter:

"It was nice of the new vicar to call."

"But, mumsie, that wasn't the vicar, that was the doctor."

"O," said the old lady, musing, "I thought he was a little familiar for a vicar."

It may not matter to many of you, of course, but I miss my dog. Due to the absurd six months quarantine law, he was left behind in Belgium with a seven-months-old Cairn Scottie, a new found friend who chews Billy's ears and nips his paws when he tries to nap. Billy merely looks at him quizzically, but never protests. Secretly I believe the Scottie has him bluffed. We shall pick him up next week to resume our motor trip.

The simpleton who took his Ingersoll to Tiffany's for repairs is a blood brother to the American who finds himself in the front row of a smart London theater wearing a sack suit. And as for the concertina or opera hat, boys, they are out like a light. The uncrushable dicer is now the berries. In Harlem they hold the first three theater rows for whites—in London for Americans.

The famous cross on St. Paul's steeple has been regilded and glittera resplendently. Twenty-five thousand leaves of 24-karat gold were used. Nothing else would withstand the London atmosphere. St. Paul's, incidentally, is beautiful and I always like to gaze at it among the first things I do while swander in London. Yet it is really just so much magnificent and noble masonry—without sympathy. It smacks entirely of pomp and prosperity and offers nothing in humility. I like my cathedrals humble.

The sun scudded out for a brief hour this afternoon and my wife and I mounted a lumbering bus top. It was then she discovered I was wearing my dinner coat pantaloons which have silk stripes down the side with blue serge coat. It's so durn muggy in this town a fellow can hardly see at all.

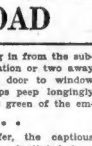
Listen, World! -:- By Elsie Robinson

I'd Like to Practice What I Preach

"YOU MAKE me sick," says she—"always telling people what to do. Do you practice what you preach?"



Elsie Robinson

No, lady, I don't. But I'd like to. For you must admit that I preach some pretty swell stuff.

But you mustn't gather from that confession that I do not mean what I write. You'll never guess how fiercely I mean it, or how bitterly I wish I could be as good as I talk.

And perhaps that is why these words which pass through my fingers seem sometimes strangely alive to those who read them. They ARE alive—alive with my own deep longing for the beauty I can paint but cannot live.

Indeed, I doubt if I could write as convincingly of honor and tolerance and courage and self-control—if I did or could live them. For no one can reverence truth like a liar, or admire courage as greatly as one who is beset by petty malice.

A really wise man can never know the bitter penalties of being stupid. And it's only the man who has nearly died of thirst in a desert who fully appreciates the wonder of water.

I don't practice what I preach. I can't. I haven't the makings. But, oh, how I wish I had. And I suspect that applies to most of us. We all want to be better than we are. We all preach what we cannot practice. But that doesn't imply that we should stop preaching.

It isn't hypocrisy to advocate virtues you, in your weakness, have never attained. It is, I suspect, one of the most valuable things we can do. For, even if we can't live nobility, we can dream about it and desire it and campaign for it. And there is real power in dreams and desires. Our world was built on them.

We'd still be formless gobs of protoplasm in primpval ooze if life, the creator, hadn't planted desire in that ooze—desire for life more abundant. Because that desire twisted and tugged, generation after generation, one cell at last became two, grew tails and gills and legs, and finally a brain. But millions of gobs lived tailless lives before one gob finally grew a tail. Yet their dumb desire for tails was quite as important in the process of evolution as that one triumphant tail.

And, by the same token, many men desire truth, but few drink hemlock for it, as did Socrates. Many love God—but few die for Him on the cross. Yet who shall say that the tears of a sinner do not deserve God's glory as much as the praise of a saint.

Often, when I'm tempted to criticise others, as you've criticized me, lady, I think of the early Christian martyrs—and what I'd done had I been in their shoes. You will remember that the Christians were offered their choice of worshipping strange gods or being eaten by lions. They took the lions. Well, I'm a Christian, too. But I have a horrible hunch that if the choice were put up to me the lions would go hungry. Yet I'm the world's most enthusiastic admirer of martyrs. But life's that way. And so is most literature.

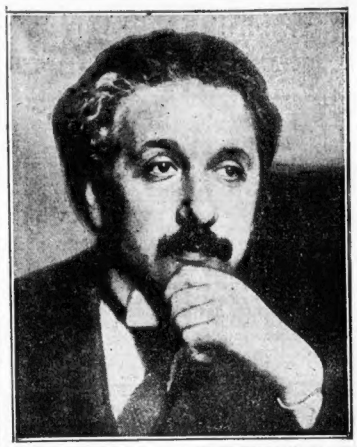
Fine Forehead, Smart Man

What Will Science in 2000 A. D. Say of Him?



PROFESSOR EINSTEIN, WHO LIMITS THE UNIVERSE WITH THE AID OF "RELATIVITY"

Millions that cannot understand his deeply scientific teachings, or intelligently interest themselves in them, will be MUCH interested in this face of Professor Einstein, great Jewish scientist and mathematician of Germany.

His views on the universe, on space and time, his theory of "relativity" have completely revolutionized astronomical and cosmic science in the opinion of many, and the "many" include scientists possessing great authority.

Others, of perhaps equal authority, reject the Einstein theory, assert that "relativity," a technical word, is only another word for man's incompetency—another acknowledgment of the fact that the INFINITE cannot be understood by a FINITE mind.

But the ordinary non-scientific mind is bewildered by the teachings of Einstein, as it is by the older and more widely accepted teachings of Newton.

Newton's law of gravitation, however, has been fully proved. Even Einstein, who is called Newton's superior, does not reject his teachings, except that he describes them as limited in their power, and not ruling all space.

Einstein teaches that space is limited; that the universe, as it were, curves back on itself; that time had a definite beginning; that space, or, as simpler minds would call it, "room," is the great and important thing—matter, earth, stars, men, animals are secondary.

That is too much for the ordinary feeble brain.

That brain inquires concerning the statement that space is limited because it is curved. "What is BEYOND the curve, what lies outside of the curve?"

This earth is limited, and it is curved. But there are space and matter outside of the earth's crust. What is there outside of the crust of the curved universe that you describe?

If there is nothing outside of that curved universe, what IS "nothing, how far does it reach?"

This face will interest all of the thoughtful. The intelligent, far-seeing eyes, the fine forehead and the delicate hand, showing that the physical energy of the body has been concentrated in the brain, will remain important in the history of science whether it is finally decided that Einstein opened a new page in the study of the cosmos, or merely wrote a more modern book of Genesis to satisy our minds by "explaining" the inexplicable.

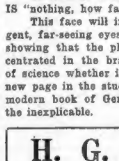
Sec. 8. Plant Breeding—Some Practical Applications

MENDEL'S SECOND Law tells us how to shuffle and redeal the characters of animals or plants and obtain new varieties.

If we take two markedly different strains and cross them, the first hybrid generation will be uniform, but in the next there will be a wild effusion of all sorts of combinations of the characters of the parents. This fact is obviously of practical importance.



H. G. Wells

If a breeder who possesses a good strain of animal or plant then finds another strain, in itself of poor general quality but with one desirable character which the other lacks, and if this desirable character depends on one or a few Mendelian factors, then by crossing the two and subsequently selecting from individually tested specimens in the second and later generations he can build up a new synthetic strain, a new vital compound, in which all the desirable qualities of both types are united.

This method has been applied with great practical success to wheat by Sir Rowland Biffen. The National Association of British and Irish Millers, dissatisfied with the wheats at their disposal, requested Biffen to try to improve them.

They demanded a beardless wheat immune to the fungus disease known as rust, with a high yield per acre, and with "hard" grain, rich in gluten, and so of good milling and bread-making quality.

No known variety combined all these characters, so Biffen set himself to make one. He crossed a rust-resistant grain of low yield and poor grain-quality with a wheat of good quality, but great susceptibility to disease. All the first generation were susceptible to rust.

This was no discouragement to a Mendelian, so Biffen obtained a large second generation by self-fertilization, and his expectations were justified by finding, among the large number of recombinations which appeared, some plants which combined rust-resistance with the desirable qualities of the susceptible stock.

The two main strains which he manufactured by Mendelian principles, "Little Joss" and "Yeoman," though only put on the market in 1912 and 1917, respectively, occupied by 1927 about a third of the wheat-growing area of the world.
